

WOLFGANG P. HIRCZY DE MINO, Ph.D.

September 25, 2020

Via e-file

Hon. Christopher A. Prine
Clerk of the Fourteenth Court of Appeals
301 Fannin Street
Houston, Texas 77002-2066

RECEIVED IN
14th COURT OF APPEALS
HOUSTON, TEXAS
9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM
CHRISTOPHER A. PRINE
Clerk

RE: Attorney General Ken Paxton/The State of Texas v. Chris Hollins, Harris County Clerk

SCOTX CASE: Texas Supreme Court Docket 20-0729 (pet. filed)

COA CASE: No. 14-20-00627-CV (post-judgment)

COA Opinion Cite: State v. Hollins, No. 14-20-00627-CV, (Tex.App.- Houston [14th Dist.] Sep. 18, 2020, pet. filed 9/23/2020) (mem. op.) (affirming denial of temporary injunction sought by the State in ultra vires suit against Harris County Clerk).

TRIAL COURT CAUSE: Cause No. 2020-52383, pending in the 127th District Court, Harris County, Texas; Judge Sandill presiding.

RELATED STATE CASES: In re Hotze, MD, et al, No. 20-0671 (orig. mandamus proceeding based on Election Code § 273.061, pending); In re State, No. 20-0715 (orig. proc., pending); In re State of Texas, No. 20-0394, 602 S.W.3d 549 (Tex. 2020).

RELATED FEDERAL CASE: Texas Democratic Party, Texas Democratic Party et al v. Abbott, et al, No. 20-50407 (5th Cir. Sep. 10, 2020); Tex. Democratic Party v. Abbott, 961 F.3d 389 (5th Cir. June 4, 2020) (panel opinion on motion for stay of district court order pending appeal).

QUESTION PRESENTED:

DOES THE FIFTH CIRCUIT DECISION OF SEPTEMBER 10, 2020 AFFECT THIS CASE?

Dear Mr. Prine:

According to an advisory letter submitted by Lead Attorney for Appellee Chris Hollins in the mandamus proceeding brought against the Fourteenth Court of Appeals, Hollins has already sent the mailer about which the Attorney General complains to the segment of the electorate that is over the age of 65.¹ A tweet from the official twitter account of the Harris County Clerk states the same. See image on next page.

As this Court may be aware, the Supreme Court of Texas has taken it upon itself to enjoin Hollins from sending the mailer to those under 65 directly, rather than ordering this Court to issue immediate relief pending resolution of the COA appeal pursuant to the State's rule 29.3 motion. See order on docket in In re State, No. 20-0715 (orig. proc., pending).

¹ In Re State of Texas, No. 20-0715. Letter filed on behalf of Chris Hollins Sep. 15, 2020 by Susan Hays.

Harris County Clerk tweet confirming mailing to 65-year old voters and older 9/20/2020

There can be no dispute that state action is involved here (both on the part of Hollins, acting in his official capacity as early voting clerk for Harris County, and on the part of the Texas Supreme Court issuing an order against him, that is in its nature and essence a restraining order) and that this disparate treatment of registered voters constitutes differential treatment expressly based on voters' age.

While the Fifth Circuit recently rejected the argument that the classification based on age made by Texas Election Code §§ 82.001-.004 violates the 26th Amendment,² the Court did not rule whether it violated the Equal Protection Clause because that issue wasn't properly presented in context of the State's interlocutory appeal on the merits, which had been slimmed down to a narrow question.³ The Fifth Court summed it up as follows:

“The real issue here is equal protection, and that is not before us.”

Additionally, the Fifth Circuit went out of its way to repudiate the prior motion panel's conclusions with respect to the rational-basis review of the age classification at issue,⁴ and declared that opinion to have no precedential weight:

² Under these provisions, the right to vote by mail without an excuse is limited to those aged 65 and over. Specifically, section 82.003 qualifies all registered voters over the age of 65 on election day to vote by mail without having to meet any other conditions. See Tex. Elec. Code Ann. § 82.003.

³ The Petitioners-Appellees had abandoned all legal bases to defend Judge Biery's preliminary injunction on appeal except their 26th Amendment claim, and had asked for remand should they not prevail on that claim.

⁴ Tex. Democratic Party v. Abbott, 961 F.3d 389 (5th Cir. 2020).

We have held there has been no denial or abridgement of a right to vote under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. On remand, equal protection questions may come to the fore. Though we cannot, in the current posture of this appeal, decide the issue of the proper scrutiny to give to this statutory provision under equal protection analysis, we need to take one further step so the issue can be considered on remand in light of this opinion. Before granting a stay, the motions panel had to decide the likelihood of the defendants' success on appeal on each of the grounds on which the district court relied in issuing a preliminary injunction. It held both that McDonald applied and that rational-basis review was appropriate. In our more limited opinion today, though, by concluding that no denial or abridgment of the right to vote under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment ever occurred, we had no denial or abridgement to scrutinize.

We have uncertainties about McDonald and do not wish that the earlier necessity for a preliminary decision on the merits by the motions panel control the remand on an issue we never reached. We therefore use our authority as the panel resolving the merits to declare that the holdings in the motions panel opinion as to McDonald are not precedent.

Texas Democratic Party v. Abbott, No. 20-50407 (5th Cir. Sep. 10, 2020) (questioning present-day import of McDonald v. Board of Election Commissioners of Chicago., 394 U.S. 802 (1969)).

Here, in State of Texas v. Hollins, the 127th District Court found that “[t]he State offers no evidence or compelling explanation for its arbitrary and selective objection to the mailing of vote by mail applications to registered voters under the age of 65.”

Given the finding of arbitrariness and lack of a proper justification,⁵ it would appear that the discriminatory treatment visited upon Harris County voters depending on whether they are over the age of 65 or under, runs afoul of the Equal Protection Clause of the federal constitution even under the least exacting constitutional scrutiny.

Even if only rational-basis review were to apply -- as opposed to some heightened level of scrutiny - voters under the age 65 will be denied the equal protection of the laws if they are prevented receiving the educational and convenience benefits of Clerk Hollins’s mailer, not to mention the information needed to avoid “walking into a felony” by accident, an ominous prospect testified to by Director of Elections Keith Ingram at the temporary injunction hearing.

Note also that Ingram testified about his office making referrals for criminal investigation and prosecution to the Attorney General.

⁵ The State did not file a request for findings of facts and conclusions of law; only the Defendant’s attorney submitted proposed findings of facts and conclusions of law, which the trial court did not sign, and was not required to, given the interlocutory nature of the order. When no findings of fact or conclusions of law are filed other than those in the order granting the temporary injunction, the trial court’s judgment must be upheld on any legal theory supported by the record. See Pinnacle Premier Props., Inc. v. Breton, 447 S.W.3d 558, 562 n.6 (Tex. App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2014, no pet.).

Finally, the irony and inconsistency of the State's position in this case is not lost on the Court. The State has stipulated that it has no objection to unsolicited mail ballot applications being sent to voters age 65 or over. But being 65 or older is only one of four statutorily permitted bases for voting by mail in Texas, the others being disability,² absence and incarceration. TEX. ELEC. CODE §§ 82.001-.004. The State offers no evidence or compelling explanation for its arbitrary and selective objection to the mailing of vote by mail applications to registered voters under the age of 65.

The Court DENIES the State of Texas's application for temporary injunction.

Signed on September 11, 2020.

R.K. Sandill
Judge, 127th District Court
Harris County, Texas

Trial Court's Arbitrariness Finding

Intervening Change in Federal Case Law

The Fifth Circuit's opinion was handed down on September 10, 2020, one day after the temporary injunction hearing in State v. Hollins. Neither party's lawyers have addressed the federal constitutional ramifications of the State's selective enforcement action based on age either in their trial court briefing or on appeal, not to mention the constitutional ramifications of a selective age-based election-related mailing program itself.

202052383 - STATE OF TEXAS (BY AND THROUGH ITS ATTORNEY GENERA vs. HOLLINS, CHRIS (IN HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY AS HARRIS (Court 127)

Chronological History All

(non-financial)

Print

Summary	Appeals	Cost Statements	Transfers	Post Trial Writs	Abstracts	Parties
Court Costs	Judgments/Events	Settings	Services/Notices	Court Registry	Child Support	Images

 Click column headings to sort. Click again to toggle direction.

Print Settings

Date	Court	Post Jdgm	Docket Type	Reason	Results	Comments	Requesting Party
9/09/2020 12:01 PM	127		Law Day Docket	TEMPORARY INJUNCTION	Denied	ORDER SIGNED 09.11.2020	ELDRED, CHARLES KENNETH

Docket Screen for 2020-052383 – TI Hearing Held 9/9/2020, Order Denying Signed 9/11/2020

In light to the intervening case law development, combined with the undisputed facts that the Harris County ABBM mailing program has already been carried out with respect to the class of registered voters that are going to be 65 or older on election day,⁶ this Court should re-evaluate the implications of the Fifth Circuit's ruling on age-discrimination for the differential treatment imposed upon Harris County voters based solely on age.

There may be grounds to conclude that the denial of the injunction sought by the State against Hollins in his official capacity might also be necessary to avoid a violation of the Equal Protection Clause under the Anderson/Burdick framework, rather than the State's failure to meet its burden to show irreparable harm, and that the TI denial order should be affirmed on that additional and self-standing basis.

If this is a correct legal conclusion, a superseding panel opinion may be warranted to add this ground for affirmance based on the new Fifth Circuit precedent that would be binding on a federal district court on a question of federal constitutional law. Additionally, it may be appropriate to re-designate this panel's revised opinion as an opinion to be PUBLISHED.⁷ See Dyer v. Medoc Health Servs., LLC, 573 S.W.3d 418, 424 (Tex. App.-Dallas 2019, pet. denied) (absent an intervening change in law, we follow our own precedent); MobileVision Imaging Serv., L.L.C. v. LifeCare Hosps. of N. Tex., L.P., 260 S.W.3d 561, 566 (Tex. App.-Dallas 2008, no pet.) ("We may not overrule a prior panel decision of this Court absent an intervening change in the law by the legislature, a higher court, or this Court sitting en banc.").

Sovereign Injury?

Please note that the Texas Supreme Court has taken the initiative to docket an appeal from this Court's September 18, 2020 judgment based on a letter filed by the Solicitor General in the mandamus case (No. 20-0715), which the Court treated as a motion for extension to file a petition for review in the related case, rather than a notice of intent to invoke the Court's appellate jurisdiction at some point in the near future. Be that as it may, the Solicitor General presumably still has to establish that the supreme court possesses jurisdiction of this interlocutory appeal, notwithstanding this court's conclusion that the State failed to meet its evidentiary burden on the "irreparable harm" prong of the analysis for an abuse of discretion in the exercise of equity powers, and the fact that the panel issued a memorandum opinion that does not purport to upend established precedents or break new legal ground.

⁶ The clerk was able to identify those voters based on their DOB in their registration records and extract from the voter database the names and mailing addresses for this age-defined sub-set of the electorate for the mailing of VBM applications and accompanying instructions.

⁷ Rule 47 of the Texas Rules of Appellate Procedure calls for each opinion of the court to be designated either an "Opinion" or a "Memorandum Opinion." See Tex. R. App. P. 47.2(a). The appellate rules do not expressly make a distinction between "publish" and "do not publish" in civil cases. Id., 47.2(b). Also see TEX. R. APP. P. 19.2 (providing that plenary power of court of appeals continues after the filing of a petition for review in the Supreme Court, but not extending the rule to the Court of Criminal Appeals).

In the State's brief on the merits, filed Tuesday, Sep. 22, 2020, the Solicitor General urges that the "irreparable harm" element in the framework governing equitable temporary injunctive relief be collapsed into the "likely merits" element, so that the State will be relieved from having to prove this element on the theory that any violation of the law is ipso facto an irreparable harm to the State.

Note also that the Solicitor General conflates the concept of an "ultra vires" act with a "violation of law" and bewails its lack of ability to make Hollins pay "cash" for the State's purported "sovereign" injury.

Who Is the Sovereign: The State or The People?

According to the Attorney General, speaking through the Solicitor General, it's all about the State, not about the People, who – as a matter of foundational principle -- are the sovereign in our system of government. See Preamble of the Texas Constitution ("Humbly invoking the blessings of Almighty God, the people of the State of Texas, do ordain and establish this Constitution."); see additionally Section 2. of the Texas Bill of Rights:

INHERENT POLITICAL POWER; REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT. All political power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit. The faith of the people of Texas stands pledged to the preservation of a republican form of government, and, subject to this limitation only, they have at all times the inalienable right to alter, reform or abolish their government in such manner as they may think expedient.

TEX. CONST. art I, § 2

The Attorney General's stance is reminiscent of absolutism ("I am the State") and is incompatible with the core tenets of the democratic form of collective self-governance. Notably, the Attorney General does not purport to speak for the people/electorate as their servant, i.e. as an agent of the public interest and the public will, but instead refers to the as them as the governed, i.e. subjects, while styling himself at The State.⁸

CONCLUSION

The Panel may wish to consider whether the Fifth Circuit's decision in Texas Democratic Party v. Abbott changes the legal analysis of this case, such that the denial of the State's application for a temporary injunction by the trial court must alternatively be upheld because the grant of the State's application would result in a violation of the Equal Protection Clause, given that the Hollins' mailer (i.e., the VBM application form with relevant voter education information) has already been distributed to a sub-set of the electorate defined solely by their age without a prior request by them.

⁸ Attorneys for Defendant Hollins in the Court below took the position that the Secretary of State, as the State's Chief Election Officer, would be the proper plaintiff to bring an action to enforce the Election Code, not "The State" by and through Attorney General Ken Paxton.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Wolfgang P. Hirczy de Miño

Wolfgang P. Hirczy de Mino, PhD

P.O. Box 521

Bellaire TX 77402-0521

Tel.: (832) 606-0251

Email: wphdmphd@gmail.com

Amicus Curiae for neither party ⁹

⁹ The author of this amicus letter is a political scientist who received his PhD from the University of Houston in 1992, having written his dissertation on Electoral Participation, and continues to have an interest in elections, elections systems and administration, and political participation broadly defined. No payment was received for the preparation of this amicus curiae letter and none is forthcoming. The parties will be served through their respective lead attorneys via the e-serve function of the Texas e-filing system. Tex. R. App. P. 11.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that I will serve the parties to this case through their respective attorneys' email addresses on file with the Texas eFile system at the time of eFiling of this submission on September 23, 2020. Success or failure will be reflected in the automatic certification of service generated by the system.

Relator State of Texas, through AG Paxton	Real Party in Interest Chris Hollins, Harris County Clerk
Kyle D. Hawkins, Solicitor General of Texas, at kyle.hawkins@oag.texas.gov	Susan Lea Hays, Lead Attorney for Chris Hollins, at hayslaw@me.com

/s/ Wolfgang P. Hirczy de Miño

Wolfgang P. Hirczy de Mino, PhD

Texas Democratic Party; Gilberto Hinojosa; Joseph Daniel Cascino; Shanda Marie Sansing; Brenda Li Garcia, Plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

Greg Abbott, Governor of the State of Texas; Ruth Hughs, Texas
Secretary of State; Ken Paxton, Texas Attorney General, Defendants-Appellants.

No. 20-50407.

United States Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit.

September 10, 2020.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, USDC No. 5:20-CV-438.

Before King, Stewart, and Southwick, Circuit Judges.

LESLIE H. SOUTHWICK, Circuit Judge.

A Texas statute allows mail-in voting for any voter at least 65 years old but requires younger voters to satisfy conditions, such as being absent from the county on election day or having a qualifying disability. Amid an election-year pandemic, the district court entered a preliminary injunction requiring Texas officials to allow any Texan eligible to vote to do so by absentee ballot. This court stayed the injunction pending appeal. The plaintiffs defend the injunction at this stage of the proceedings only on the basis that the vote-by-mail privilege for older voters is unconstitutional under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment's prohibition against denying or abridging the right to vote on account of age. The statutory provision withstands that challenge. We VACATE and REMAND.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In Texas, in-person voting is the rule. Tex. Elec. Code ch. 64. Early voting by mail is the exception. Id. ch. 82. Texas law permits early voting by mail for voters who: (1) anticipate being absent from their county of residence; (2) are sick or disabled; (3) are 65 years of age or older; or (4) are confined to jail. Id. §§ 82.001-.004.

The 2020 COVID-19 pandemic prompted Texas state officials to adopt various emergency measures. In March, Governor Greg Abbott declared a state of disaster for all of Texas. He also postponed the May primary runoff election until July. In May, he extended the period for early voting for the July primary to help the election proceed efficiently and safely. Texas Secretary of State Ruth Hughs issued a proclamation in May concerning early voting hours and federal funding to combat the pandemic. Secretary Hughs also issued guidance concerning health and safety measures for in-person voting. The guidance encouraged voters to wear masks, disinfect their hands, and practice social distancing. In June, Secretary Hughs issued additional guidance concerning social distancing and sanitization of polling places.

State-court litigation preceded the suit we have. In March, the Texas Democratic Party, its Chairman, and two voters sued a county clerk in Texas state court, and the State intervened. The plaintiffs sought a declaration that under the disability provision, Section 82.002 of the Texas Election Code, "any eligible voter, regardless of age and physical condition" may vote by mail "if they believe they should practice social distancing in order to hinder the known or unknown spread of a virus or disease." Under their interpretation, lack of immunity as well as concern about transmission qualified as a disability for the purpose of eligibility for mail-in voting. After the State intervened, the state court entered an injunction barring Texas officials from "prohibit[ing] individuals from submitting mail ballots based on the disability category" during the pandemic. The State immediately filed a notice of interlocutory appeal, which superseded and stayed the injunction order. See In re Texas, 602 S.W.3d 549, 552 (Tex. 2020).

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton sought to reduce confusion surrounding the state-court action by sending a letter to Texas judges and election officials in early May. The letter explained: "Based on the plain language of the relevant statutory text, fear of contracting COVID-19 unaccompanied by a qualifying sickness or physical condition does not constitute a disability under the Texas Election Code for purposes of receiving a ballot by mail." The letter ordered public officials to refrain from advising voters who lacked a qualifying condition but nonetheless feared COVID-19 to vote by mail. The letter warned third parties that if they advised voters to vote by mail without a qualifying disability, then the party could be subject to criminal liability under the Texas Election Code. The plaintiffs characterize this guidance as a threat underlying some of the claims not before the court today and rely on it for part of their sovereign-immunity argument.

After a Texas Court of Appeals reinstated the initial injunction, the State sought an emergency mandamus from the Supreme Court of Texas. On May 27, the Supreme Court of Texas held "that a lack of immunity to COVID-19 is not itself a 'physical condition' for being eligible to vote by mail within the meaning of [Section] 82.002(a)." In re Texas, 602 S.W.3d at 560. A voter may "take into consideration aspects of his health and his health history" in deciding whether to apply to vote by mail, but COVID-19 is not itself a ground for voting by mail. Id. The In re Texas court found it unnecessary to issue a writ of mandamus, id. at 561, and the plaintiffs dismissed that suit with prejudice on June 9.

While the state-court litigation was pending, the plaintiffs filed this lawsuit in early April in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas and added a third voter as a plaintiff. The plaintiffs' operative complaint requested relief on seven grounds. The plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction slimmed down the claims and argued that Texas's statute allowing voting by mail for any persons aged at least 65 violated the First, Fourteenth, and Twenty-Sixth Amendments,¹¹ and that it was void for vagueness. They also asserted that the Attorney General's May letter constituted voter intimidation and suppression of political speech.

On May 19, the district court issued an order requiring no-excuse mail-in balloting in Texas, meaning that "[a]ny eligible Texas voter who seeks to vote by mail in order to avoid transmission of COVID-19" could do so. The court's preliminary injunction prohibited the defendants from issuing any guidance, threats, pronouncements, or otherwise taking any action inconsistent with the order. The district court concluded that the plaintiffs were likely to succeed on the merits of each of their claims. On the only claim that remains for us on this appeal, namely, a violation of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, the district court applied strict scrutiny to the law. Voters under 65, according to the district court, bear a disproportionate burden because of the age restrictions set out in Section 82.003 of the Texas Election Code, which the court concluded "violates the [Twenty-Sixth] Amendment, as applied, during the COVID-19 pandemic." Going one step further, the district court added that neither a legitimate interest nor a rational basis existed for enforcing the age-based distinction during the pandemic.

Just eight days after entering this injunction, the Supreme Court of Texas issued its decision in In re Texas. Meanwhile, the defendants appealed the federal injunction. The defendants also filed an emergency motion for a stay pending appeal and a temporary administrative stay.

In June 2020, a panel of this court that had the responsibility to resolve motions filed in the appeal prior to completion of briefing granted the defendants' motion to stay the district court's preliminary injunction pending the decision on the merits — which we now are entering. See Tex. Democratic Party v. Abbott, 961 F.3d 389, 397 \(5th Cir. 2020\). That panel concluded that the defendants were likely to succeed on the merits of each claim. See id. at 402-11. As to the Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, it found "plenty of evidence that the Amendment's most immediate purpose was to lower the voting age from twenty-one to eighteen." Id. at 408. Relying on a Supreme Court opinion slightly predating the Amendment, the motions panel concluded that rational-basis review applied to the Texas age-based absentee voting law. Id. at 408-09 (citing McDonald v. Bd. of Election Comm'rs of Chi., 394 U.S. 802, 807-08 \(1969\)). The court reasoned that giving a benefit of voting by mail to one class does not affect plaintiffs' right to vote because the Twenty-Sixth Amendment concerns only the denial or abridgement of voters' rights. Id. at 409. That meant that the plaintiffs were unlikely to succeed on the merits of their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, just as they were similarly unlikely to succeed on their other claims. Consequently, the district court's injunction was stayed.

We remark here that though we are greatly benefitted by the earlier panel's analysis of the issues before us, under our circuit's procedures, opinions and orders of a panel with initial responsibility for resolving motions filed in an appeal are not binding on the later panel that is assigned the appeal for resolution. Northshore Dev., Inc. v. Lee, 835 F.2d 580, 583 \(5th Cir. 1988\). We agree with much but not quite all of the earlier opinion.

DISCUSSION

The district court granted a preliminary injunction based on four claims for relief — the First, Fourteenth, and Twenty-Sixth Amendments as well as the void-for-vagueness doctrine. The defendants' appeal suggests three jurisdictional bars and challenges all of the bases on which the injunction was granted. The plaintiffs, though, defend the injunction only on their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim.^[2] Unclear, though, is the breadth of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim now being made by the plaintiffs. The point of uncertainty is whether the effect of the COVID-19 pandemic, even though it was central to arguments at the district court level, has been withdrawn from our review. We explain the competing indications.

Following this court's decision in June to enter a stay of the preliminary injunction, briefs were filed that guide the decision we are issuing today. As we just said, the plaintiffs' brief stated that it was defending the preliminary injunction only on Twenty-Sixth Amendment grounds. The plaintiffs asserted "it is not the State's tragic inability to contain the COVID-19 epidemic that compels affirmance of the District Court's order — it is the Twenty-Sixth Amendment's unambiguous text that does." The brief certainly explains the procedural history of this action in federal court and of the parallel action in state court; there, the brief places COVID-19 front and center. The argument section, though, almost never refers to COVID-19 in explaining why the Amendment invalidates the relevant Texas Election Code provision. There are a few, one might even say stray, usages of the pandemic to support their arguments.^[3] The defendants in their reply brief classified the plaintiffs' argument now as being solely a facial challenge to the Amendment.

If in fact the plaintiffs withdrew their reliance on the pandemic and are instead making a facial challenge, that could transform the appeal into a constitutional argument that has little relevance to the district court's reasons for granting a preliminary injunction. For example, that court's analysis of harm to the plaintiffs and their likelihood of success on the merits — two criteria for the preliminary injunction — relied exclusively on the pandemic. Yes, a facial challenge would be a legal issue subject to our de novo review had the district court decided it, but that court did not do so.

We need not resolve whether the plaintiffs indeed are now trying to have us consider the facial challenge even though that was not considered by the district court. Appellate rules regarding how we treat absent issues differ depending on whether it is the appellant or the appellee who has neglected them. An appellant can intentionally waive or inadvertently forfeit the right to present an argument by failure to press it on appeal, a higher threshold than simply mentioning the issue. Nichols v. Enterasys Networks, Inc., 495 F.3d 185, 190 \(5th Cir. 2007\). On the other hand, even an appellee's failure to file a brief does not cause an automatic reversal of the judgment being appealed. By appellate rule, so extreme a lapse does cause the appellee to lose the right to appear at oral argument. FED. R. APP. P. 31(c). We also know that if we disagree with the grounds relied upon by a district court to enter judgment but discover another fully supported by the record, we can affirm on that alternative basis. See Williams ex rel. J.E. v. Reeves, 954 F.3d 729, 735 \(5th Cir. 2020\).

There are a few cases that consider rules of waiver even for appellees.^[4] For example, our discretion to consider an argument not properly presented is "more leniently [applied] when the party who fails to brief an issue is the appellee." United States v. Guillen-Cruz, 853 F.3d 768, 777 \(5th Cir. 2017\) (quoting Hernandez v. Garcia Pena, 820 F.3d 782, 786 n.3 \(5th Cir. 2016\)).

We consider the ambiguity in the plaintiffs' briefing to present another variant of these principles. Regardless of whether plaintiffs were abandoning the defense of the injunction on the grounds on which it was issued, and we cannot discern if they were, we will review the validity of the actual judgment, not some alternative.

We begin with the defendants' arguments about standing, sovereign immunity, and the political question doctrine.

I. Plaintiffs' standing

The first jurisdictional question is whether the plaintiffs have standing to challenge Texas's election law. To establish standing, a plaintiff must show: (1) an injury in fact to the plaintiff that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent; (2) the injury was caused by the defendant; and (3) the injury would likely be redressed by the requested judicial relief. Thole v. U. S. Bank N.A., 140 S. Ct. 1615, 1618 \(2020\). In the preliminary-injunction context, plaintiffs must make a "clear showing" of standing to maintain the injunction. Barber v. Bryant, 860 F.3d 345, 352 \(5th Cir. 2017\). Standing is a question we review de novo. Pederson v. La. State Univ., 213 F.3d 858, 869 \(5th Cir. 2000\).

This case involves two groups of plaintiffs: (1) three registered Texas voters under 65 years old who desired to vote in the July 14 Texas Democratic Primary and the November election; and (2) the Texas Democratic Party and its Chairman. We have held that, in the context of injunctive relief, one plaintiff's successful demonstration of standing "is sufficient to satisfy Article III's case-or-controversy requirement." Texas v. United States, 945 F.3d 355, 377-78 \(5th Cir. 2019\). The voter plaintiffs contend that they suffer a sufficient injury in fact because they are, unlike older voters, forced to vote in person and risk contracting or spreading COVID-19. They assert that the injury is fairly traceable to the defendants' enforcement of Section 82.003, and that their injury would be redressed by an injunction requiring what they consider to be non-discriminatory access to mail-in voting.

The defendants challenge only the causation prong, arguing that the voter plaintiffs lack standing because their injury is caused by COVID-19, not the defendants. The injury alleged in the brief actually is the result of the combination of COVID-19 and Texas officials' continuing enforcement of Section 82.003 as written. The defendants argue that the officials have no authority to relent in enforcement of the statute.

We conclude that a voter under the age of 65 has standing to make that challenge. The Texas Secretary of State's connection to the enforcement of the Texas Election Code is enough to confer standing to the voter plaintiffs. OCA-Greater Hous. v. Texas, 867 F.3d 604, 613 \(5th Cir. 2017\). We held that a facial challenge to a Texas Election Code section was "without question, fairly traceable to and redressable by the State itself and its Secretary of State, who serves as the chief election officer of the state." Id. (quotation marks omitted). Like the section at issue in OCA-Greater Houston, the challenged section of the Texas Election Code "applies to every election held in the state of Texas" and falls squarely within the Secretary's duty to "obtain and maintain uniformity in the application, operation, and interpretation of" the Texas Election Code. Id. at 613-14. As the chief election officer of the state, the Secretary is charged, at least in part, with the enforcement of the Election Code. Accordingly, we hold that the voter plaintiffs have met their burden on the causation prong and therefore have standing in this case. We need not address the arguments about the standing of other plaintiffs. See Texas, 945 F.3d at 377-78.

II. Defendants' sovereign immunity

The defendants assert that they are entitled to sovereign immunity. State sovereign immunity prohibits "private suits against nonconsenting states in federal court." City of Austin v. Paxton, 943 F.3d 993, 997 \(5th Cir. 2019\). State officials and agencies enjoy the same immunity. Id. Unless waived by the state, abrogated by Congress, or an exception applies, the immunity precludes suit. Id.

The plaintiffs contend that sovereign immunity does not bar their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim under the exception carved out in Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 \(1908\). Suits for injunctive or declaratory relief are allowed against a state official acting in violation of federal law if there is a "sufficient 'connection' to enforcing an allegedly unconstitutional law." In re Abbott, 956 F.3d 696, 708 \(5th Cir. 2020\).

This circuit has not spoken with conviction about all relevant details of the "some connection" requirement. Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 400. An en banc plurality of this court explained that "the officers [must] have 'some connection with the enforcement of the act' in question or be 'specially charged with the duty to enforce the statute' and be threatening to exercise that duty." Okpalobi v. Foster, 244 F.3d 405, 414-15 \(5th Cir. 2001\) \(en banc\) (plurality op.). Without a majority, no controlling precedent was made. See K.P. v. LeBlanc, 627 F.3d 115, 124 \(5th Cir. 2010\). In K.P., we declined to "resolve whether Ex Parte Young requires only 'some connection' or a 'special relationship' between the state actor and the challenged statute," because the defendant fell within the exception under either standard. Id.

We need not resolve more of the particulars today because at least one defendant falls within the exception under either standard. A sufficient connection is more than "the general duty to see that the laws of the state are implemented, but the particular duty to enforce the statute in question and a demonstrated willingness to exercise that duty." Morris v. Livingston, 739 F.3d 740, 746 \(5th Cir. 2014\) (quotation marks omitted). Stated differently, the official must be "statutorily tasked with enforcing the challenged law." In re Abbott, 956 F.3d at 709. Further, there must be at least "some scintilla of `enforcement' by the relevant state official." City of Austin, 943 F.3d at 1002. Enforcement typically means "compulsion or constraint." Id. at 1000. Finally, we have recognized "significant overlap" between standing and Ex parte Young. Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 401 (quoting Air Evac EMS, Inc. v. Tex. Dep't of Ins., 851 F.3d 507, 520 \(5th Cir. 2017\)). "At the minimum, our caselaw shows that a finding of standing tends toward a finding that the Young exception applies to the state official(s) in question." City of Austin, 943 F.3d at 1002.

The plaintiffs' Twenty-Sixth Amendment challenge to Section 82.003 claims a violation of the United States Constitution. The requirement under Ex parte Young that the official be acting in violation of federal law is therefore met. City of Austin, 943 F.3d at 997.

The Secretary of State has a close statutory connection to the Texas Election Code. As explained in our analysis of standing, we have held that a challenge to the facial validity of a section of the Texas Election Code was "without question, fairly traceable to and redressable by the State itself and its Secretary of State, who serves as the chief election officer of the state." OCA-Greater Hous., 867 F.3d at 613 (quotation marks omitted). The statutory section at issue in this case "applies to every election held in the state of Texas," and falls within the Secretary of State's duty to "obtain and maintain uniformity in the application, operation, and interpretation of" the Texas Election Code. Id. at 613-14.

The defendants argue that Ex parte Young cannot apply because there is no action by the Secretary that the court could enjoin. Were we to hold, though, that Section 82.003 of the Texas Election Code is unconstitutional, the effect would be to require the Secretary of State to cease enforcing it. As the chief election officer of the state, the Secretary is charged at least in part with enforcement of the Texas Election Code. We conclude that there exists a "scintilla of `enforcement,'" City of Austin, 943 F.3d at 1002, and a "duty to see that the laws of the state are implemented," Morris, 739 F.3d at 746. The Secretary has both a sufficient connection and special relationship to the Texas Election Code. Accordingly, sovereign immunity does not bar suit against the Secretary.

As to the Governor, we conclude he lacks a sufficient connection to the enforcement of an allegedly unconstitutional law. In re Abbott, 956 F.3d at 708-09. As the motion's panel in this case stated, the actions the Governor took — to postpone the May 2020 primary and expand the early voting period — were exercises of the Governor's emergency powers unrelated to the Election Code. The Governor is not "statutorily tasked with enforcing the challenged law." Id. at 709. The challenged law, Section 82.003, certainly operates independently of influence or enforcement from the Governor. As a result, the connection between the Governor and enforcement of the challenged provision is insufficient, and Ex parte Young does not apply to him.

As for the Attorney General, whether Ex parte Young applies is a closer question. The plaintiffs' only argument as to this official is that, in previous cases, the state of Texas has "concede[d] that the attorney general has a duty to enforce and uphold the laws of Texas." See City of Austin v. Abbott, 385 F. Supp. 3d 537, 544 \(W.D. Tex. 2019\). We have already held that "[t]he required connection is not merely the general duty to see that the laws of the state are implemented, but the particular duty to enforce the statute in question and a demonstrated willingness to exercise that duty." Morris, 739 F.3d at 746 (quotation marks omitted). A general duty to enforce the law is insufficient for Ex parte Young.

Plaintiffs also focus us on the letters sent by the Attorney General. True, we applied the Ex parte Young exception to this Attorney General after his office sent to a manufacturer numerous "threatening letters" that "intimat[ed] that formal enforcement" of the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act "was on the horizon." NiGen Biotech, L.L.C. v. Paxton, 804 F.3d 389, 392, 397 \(5th Cir. 2015\). Conversely, we have declined to apply Ex parte Young where the Attorney General issued a press release warning that anyone who violated the Governor's recent emergency order would be "met with the full force of the law." In re Abbott, 956 F.3d at 709. We explained that "our cases do not support the proposition that an official's public statement alone establishes authority to enforce a law, or the likelihood of his doing so, for Young purposes." Id. at 709.

Unlike NiGen, the Attorney General's letter in this case was sent to judges and election officials, not to the plaintiffs. The letter did not make a specific threat or indicate that enforcement was forthcoming. Nor did it state that the Texas Democratic Party or the other plaintiffs had violated any specific law, as the letter did in NiGen, 804 F.3d at 392. Instead, the letter explained that advising voters to pursue disability-based mail-in voting without a qualifying condition constituted a felony under Sections 84.0041 and 276.013 of the Texas Election Code. As a result, we conclude that the letter here did not "intimat[e] that formal enforcement was on the horizon." Id. Instead, it closely reflected the Attorney General's letter in In re Abbott, 956 F.3d at 709. Accordingly, the Attorney General lacks a requisite connection to the challenged law, and Ex parte Young does not apply to him.

III. Political question doctrine

The defendants insist the plaintiffs' as-applied challenge based on Texas officials' response to the COVID-19 pandemic presents a nonjusticiable political question. In their view, our answering whether the pandemic presents a need to change election rules to protect voters is a question constitutionally committed to other branches of government. See Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 217 (1962). The Supreme Court has warned that "lower federal courts should ordinarily not alter . . . election rules on the eve of an election." Republican Nat'l Comm. v. Democratic Nat'l Comm., 140 S. Ct. 1205, 1207 \(2020\). Further, they argue that we must refrain from judgment out of respect for the executive and legislative branches of the state of Texas. See Baker, 369 U.S. at 217. Finally, they assert that there is no "judicially discoverable and manageable standard[]" for resolving whether Texas's age-based absentee-voting law meets constitutional muster in the context of the pandemic. See id. The plaintiffs disagree, arguing they have presented a "straightforward constitutional claim" capable of resolution by judicially discoverable and manageable standards.

The motions panel on this case rejected the political question doctrine as an impediment, concluding that it "need not — and will not — consider the prudence of Texas's plans for combating [COVID-19] when holding elections." Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 398. Instead, resolution of the appeal was said to turn on "whether the challenged provisions of the Texas Election Code run afoul of the Constitution, not whether they offend the policy preferences of a federal district judge." Id. at 398-99.

We agree that no political question bars our review of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment challenge. We are tasked with determining whether Section 82.003 of the Texas Election Code violates the Twenty-Sixth Amendment as applied during the pandemic, a question susceptible to judicial resolution without interfering with the political branches of Texas government. Even when "matters related to a State's . . . elective process are implicated by this Court's resolution of a question," as our resolution of this appeal will do, that "is not sufficient to justify our withholding decision of the question." Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 351-52 \(1976\). Judicially discoverable and manageable standards exist to help us determine whether the law runs afoul of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. Namely, we determine whether the law denies or abridges the plaintiffs' right to vote based on age. If it does, then we will apply an appropriate level of scrutiny. The effects of the pandemic are relevant to answering whether the law denies or abridges the right to vote, but the standards themselves do not yield to the pandemic.

For these reasons, we hold that the political question doctrine does not bar our review of the plaintiffs' as-applied challenge. A constitutional issue at its core, our analysis does not turn on policy determinations from Texas's executive and legislative officials. To the extent the plaintiffs present a facial challenge, our analysis would not turn on the effect of the pandemic and therefore would similarly avoid a political question.

Because we conclude there are no jurisdictional impediments to the plaintiffs' bringing these claims, we now turn to the merits of the injunction. The defendants in their opening brief challenged all the grounds used by the district court. Plaintiffs defend only on the basis of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. We exercise our discretion to review only that basis and not examine the alternative grounds to determine if any of them would sustain the judgment. The briefing discusses only the one ground, and the parties need a ruling.

We also forewarn on a possible, seeming inconsistency. Though we are not ruling on a facial challenge, it is impossible to consider the as-applied challenge based on the pandemic without addressing what is generally required to violate the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. The line between the two forms of challenge can be ephemeral, or as the Supreme Court has stated, the difference "is not so well defined that it has some automatic effect or that it must always control the pleadings and disposition in every case involving a constitutional challenge." Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm'n, 558 U.S. 310, 331 \(2010\). We reach conclusions as to what is necessary to deny or abridge the right to vote on the basis of age, as we can do no other.

IV. Twenty-Sixth Amendment

Section 1 of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment provides: "The right of citizens of the United States, who are eighteen years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age." Section 2 gives Congress enforcement power. Ratified in 1971, the most recent of the voting-rights constitutional amendments has yet to be interpreted in any significant depth. After almost fifty years, apparently it now is time in several jurisdictions.

The parties have presented rather different interpretations of the Amendment. The plaintiffs contend that the Amendment creates a sweeping prohibition against any age-based denial or abridgment of the right to vote. Further, they contend that any differential treatment in terms of voting on the basis of age is a plainly unconstitutional denial or abridgment. Such an interpretation is said to be consistent with the Fifteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Fourth Amendments. Under their reading, Section 82.003 is unconstitutional under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment because it offers mail-in voting to voters over 65 without offering the same benefit to younger voters. Even if not facially unconstitutional, the plaintiffs argue that the election law is unconstitutional as-applied "during the COVID-19 pandemic."

The defendants argue that the Twenty-Sixth Amendment was simply an extension of the right to vote to individuals between the ages of 18 and 21, not to eliminate all age-based distinctions in election-related laws. They further contend that Texas's mail-in ballot rules do not affect the right to vote under the Amendment because the laws neither abridge nor deny the right of voters younger than 65 to vote.

Also divergent are the arguments about the level of scrutiny to give to the challenged provision. Texas argues for rational-basis review, but the district court applied strict scrutiny. Perhaps because another panel of this court entered a stay of the preliminary injunction by finding only rational-basis review applied, Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 409, the plaintiffs' current briefing exercised some caution by not explicitly identifying a standard. Still, the plaintiffs' disagreement with the motions panel is pressed, as is their belief that some heightened level of scrutiny is required.

A. An Individual Right

We first examine whether the Twenty-Sixth Amendment confers an individual right to be free from any denial or abridgment of the right to vote. We acknowledge this has not been an issue in the case, but we need to walk through the only recently developing analysis of this amendment with care.

The language and structure of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment mirror the Fifteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Fourth Amendments.^[5] Each of those amendments has been interpreted to provide an individual right to be free from the denial or abridgement of the right to vote based on the classification described in the Amendment. The Fifteenth Amendment prohibits voting laws that "handicap exercise of the franchise" on account of race because the Amendment "nullifies sophisticated as well as simple-minded modes of [racial] discrimination." Lane v. Wilson, 307 U.S. 268, 275 \(1939\). The Nineteenth Amendment "applies to men and women alike and by its own force supersedes inconsistent measures." Breedlove v. Suttles, 302 U.S. 277, 283 \(1937\), overruled on other grounds by Harper v. Va. State Bd. of Elections, 383 U.S. 663, 668-69 \(1966\). Likewise, the Twenty-

Fourth Amendment provides a right to vote without paying a poll tax. Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528, 540-41 \(1965\). These are Supreme Court interpretations of the Fifteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Fourth Amendments predating the 1971 ratification of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

We hold that the Twenty-Sixth Amendment confers an individual right to be free from the denial or abridgment of the right to vote on account of age, the violation of which allows for pursuing a claim in court. We now turn to what denial and abridgment in this context mean.

B. Scope of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment's Protection

For Section 82.003 of the Texas Election Code to be constitutional, its granting to those at least 65 years of age an excuse-free right to a mail ballot cannot be a denial or abridgment of not-as-old voters' rights to vote either facially or during the pandemic. Because we conclude that by definition no denial or abridgment has occurred, it is unnecessary for us to assess the applicable level of scrutiny to apply had there been either. On remand, the issue may arise. For that reason, we will discuss levels of scrutiny generally at the end of the opinion.

As we search for the meaning of the key terms, we find direction from a time not too long ago when the Supreme Court began to give meaning to a different amendment long ignored in litigation as this one has been, namely, the Second. District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 \(2008\). The Court considered how the words and phrases of that amendment had been used and interpreted in other constitutional provisions. Id. at 579-81. The Court wrote a lengthy exegesis of each significant term in the Second Amendment and its usage at the time of ratification. Id. at 579-95. That time was contemporaneous with the adoption of the Constitution itself. Among its lengthier explanations was the understanding at that time of "keep and bear Arms," and each of the key words had a discernable late-Eighteenth-Century meaning. Id. at 581-92. A focus as well was how the same or at least similar terms that also appeared elsewhere in the Constitution had been interpreted. For example, the Second Amendment's phrase "right of the people" was held to guarantee an individual right to possess and carry a weapon in case of confrontation, id. at 592, at least in part because the same phrase used in other constitutional provisions "unambiguously refer[s] to individual rights," id. at 579.

Similarly, in the statutory context, "there is a natural presumption that identical words used in different parts of the same act are intended to have the same meaning." Atl. Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. v. United States, 286 U.S. 427, 433 \(1932\). Different here than in most statutory interpretation contexts, though, are the large gaps in time between the adoption of different amendments that use language similar to each other or to the original Constitution itself.

Just as Heller examined such questions as what to "keep and bear arms" meant in the Founding Era, relevant for us is how broad or limited the phrase "right to vote" was interpreted at the time the Amendment was ratified. This will establish our baseline. That meaning is the context for the use of the phrase, and with "textual interpretation, context is everything." ANTONIN SCALIA, A MATTER OF INTERPRETATION: FEDERAL COURTS AND THE LAW 37 (1997).

Understanding what the right to vote meant at the time the Twenty-Sixth Amendment was ratified in 1971 is certainly assisted by the 1969 McDonald decision. McDonald, 394 U.S. at 807-08. A definitive meaning of the right to vote and of denying that right could hardly have been given any closer to the time the Amendment was ratified. In McDonald, the Supreme Court held that denying mail-in ballots to incarcerated persons otherwise eligible to vote did not "deny appellants the exercise of the franchise." Id. The Court explained that it was "thus not the right to vote that [was] at stake [t]here but a claimed right to receive absentee ballots." Id. at 807.

We also consider some Congressional sources. Though we find no utility in examining the individual statements of various members of Congress who spoke to their beliefs — or perhaps only their hopes in guiding future interpretations — as to the meaning of the Amendment, we are willing to examine materials that accurately reflect what Congress was willing to adopt by joint action and present to a President who then was willing to register agreement. Enacted revisions to statutes are part of "statutory history," not "the sort of unenacted legislative history that often is neither truly legislative (having failed to survive bicameralism and presentment) nor truly historical (consisting of advocacy aimed at winning in future litigation what couldn't be won in past statutes)." BNSF Ry. Co. v. Loos, 139 S. Ct. 893, 906 \(2019\) \(Gorsuch, J., dissenting\).

Congress did not in this instance revise earlier enacted legislation by passing a new bill. Instead, after the Supreme Court invalidated part of its earlier effort, Congress revised by proposing a constitutional amendment through proper bicameral procedures, then presented it to the states where it was ratified. We explain.

The Voting Rights Act was adopted in 1965 to ensure that the right to vote would not be denied or abridged on account of race or color. See 52 U.S.C. § 10301. In its 1970 renewal, Congress added a provision that lowered the voting age from 21 to 18: "Except as required by the Constitution, no citizen of the United States who is otherwise qualified to vote in any State or political subdivision in any primary or in any election shall be denied the right to vote in any such primary or election on account of age if such citizen is eighteen years of age or older."^[6] That addition "evidence[d] dissatisfaction of Congress with the voting age set by many of the States for national elections." Oregon v. Mitchell, 400 U.S. 112, 124 \(1970\). The slogan for some who urged this change was "old enough to fight, old enough to vote."^[7] The providing of absentee ballots to soldiers in Vietnam or otherwise away from home played a role in spurring this change.

Perhaps Congress was willing to hazard lowering the voting age by legislation even for state elections because the Supreme Court had upheld the 1965 Voting Right Act's ban on use of literacy tests based on Congress's Fifteenth Amendment enforcement power. See South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301 \(1966\). Lowering the voting age by federal statute for all elections, though, could not be supported by the same arguments. The Court in December 1970 held that the 1970 Amendment to the Voting Rights Act setting the voting age at 18 was within Congress's power with respect to federal elections but not as to state and local elections. Mitchell, 400 U.S. at 117-18. At the time, forty-seven states began recognizing the right to vote at an age higher than eighteen.^[8]

The Twenty-Sixth Amendment followed immediately. Approved by Congress in March of 1971 and ratified by June, the Amendment was the most quickly ratified constitutional amendment in our history.^[9] This is some indication that the Twenty-Sixth Amendment was at least perceived as having a narrower sweep than the other constitutional amendments affecting voting, which in this instance was to fulfill what Congress tried but failed to do in 1970 in lowering the voting age for all elections.

We also look at details of absentee voting nationwide, data that was provided to Congress when it was considering the 1970 Voting Rights Act amendments as well as what became the Twenty Sixth Amendment. One 1973 review of the election laws, apparently mirroring but updating research provided to Congress in 1968-69, showed there was much variation.^[10]

According to a 1968 compilation, only two states at that time were providing a special privilege for older voters to cast absentee ballots; by 1973, there were four.^[11] There were other differences:

Maine has the most sweeping statute; it provides that any registered voter may cast an absentee ballot. Presumably, those who are able to vote in person do so, but the statute does not require applicants for absentee ballots to demonstrate an inability to reach the polls. In all other states, voters who wish to cast an absentee ballot must demonstrate that they fall within a statutory classification.

Although most states provide absentee ballots in all elections, four restrict their use to general elections. In many states, eligibility is determined by the voter's actual distance from his home. The majority of states require absence from the county of the voter's residence; others require absence from the state, the city, or the precinct. Some absentee-ballot legislation encompasses classes of voters who are within the election district but cannot reach the polls. Almost all states allow the physically incapacitated to cast absentee ballots. Some also furnish absentee ballots to students, to election workers stationed at precincts other than their own, to persons over sixty-five years of age, and to persons whose religious beliefs prevent them from attending the polls on election day.^[12]

Other variants among the states were permitting absentee voting for those whose religious tenets prevented attendance at the polls, or for those who participated in the election process itself.^[13]

Though this data provided to Congress when considering the 1970 and 1971 enactments indicate that almost all states at the time of submission of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment permitted absentee voting by those who were temporarily removed from proximity to their polls, there was much variation — being absent from the precinct, city, county, or state.^[14] Those variations were eliminated in part by the 1970 Voting Rights Amendments: "[E]ach State shall provide by law for the casting of absentee ballots for . . . President and Vice President . . . by all duly qualified residents of such State who may be absent from their election district or unit in such State on the day such election is held and who have applied therefor not later than seven days immediately prior to such election," then who timely return their ballots. See Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1970, Pub. L. No. 91-285, § 202, 84 Stat. 314, 316-17, codified as 52 U.S.C. § 10502(d). The Mitchell Court upheld

this standardization of the right to an absentee ballot in Presidential elections when a voter was away from home, and it remains the law today. Mitchell, 400 U.S. at 119.

The significance we give to this status quo for absentee voting at the time of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment is that, despite all the variations in the states, the only congressional insistence in the Voting Rights Amendment was to make uniform the right and the timing of the providing of absentee ballots for federal offices to those away from their homes on election day. Deciding whether the Twenty-Sixth Amendment should be interpreted as doing even more is informed by this version of statutory history.

The Supreme Court distinguished between a right to vote and a right to vote absentee: "It is thus not the right to vote that is at stake here but a claimed right to receive absentee ballots." McDonald, 394 U.S. at 807. We also conclude that Judge Ho was correct when concurring to the entry of a stay during the pendency of this appeal when he wrote: "For nearly a century, mail-in voting has been the exception — and in-person voting the rule — in Texas." Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 414 \(Ho, J., concurring\).

In summary, the right to vote in 1971 did not include a right to vote by mail. In-person voting was the rule, absentee voting the exception. Though we identify this historical context for the Amendment, certainly our imperative is to focus on the text. "Only the written word is the law, and all persons are entitled to its benefit." Bostock v. Clayton Cty., 140 S. Ct. 1731, 1737 \(2020\). Even "small gestures can have unexpected consequences," id., which is relevant when considering whether the nearly forgotten Twenty-Sixth Amendment invalidates any age-based limitation on voting.

We now consider when the right to vote is "denied" and "abridged."

1. To deny the right to vote

Before ratification, the Supreme Court held that the right to vote was not "denied" where there was no indication that the challengers were "in fact absolutely prohibited from voting." McDonald, 394 U.S. at 807-08 & n.7. After ratification, the Court held that plaintiffs' right to vote was denied when the challenged election law did "absolutely prohibit[]" them from voting." Goosby v. Osser, 409 U.S. 512, 521 \(1971\). Under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, then, "denied" means "prohibited." There has been no denial here.

2. To abridge the right to vote

There are no meaningful differences through the relevant time period as to the meaning of the term "abridge." One definition in 1968 was "[t]o reduce or contract; usually spoken of written language." Abridge, BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY 2-3 (4th ed. 1968). Later but similar definitions are "[t]o reduce or diminish." Abridge, BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY 7 (10th ed. 2014); Abridge, BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY 6 (8th ed. 2004).

Evaluating whether there has been a denial of a right will rarely involve a comparison. On the other hand, "[i]t makes no sense to suggest that a voting practice 'abridges' the right to vote without some baseline with which to compare the practice." Reno v. Bossier Parish

Sch. Bd., 528 U.S. 320, 334 (2000). More, later, on this opinion. We are not focused today on how important that right is, but it is one of importance, central to a democratic system. Instead, we are seeking a clear understanding of the right itself, from which we then can determine whether something the government has done in its election rules has denied or abridged the right.

We start our analysis of how to make comparisons for purposes of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment by considering plaintiffs' argument. They insist that an abridgment occurs any time a new election law makes voting more difficult for one age group than it is for another. Under that construct, when Texas in 1975 legislated a privilege for older voters to cast absentee votes without needing to satisfy one of the existing reasons such as being out of the county, it abridged younger voters' rights even though no change was made as to them.^[15] In essence, a new baseline for voting arises with each new election rule. If some category of voters has more limited rights after the change in comparison to other categories, an abridgement has occurred.

Our first reaction is that this seems an implausible reading of "abridge." Conceptually, plaintiffs are converting the Twenty-Sixth Amendment into the positive assertion that voting rights must be identical for all age groups at all times. Any indulgence solely for one age group of voters would fail; voters of all ages must get the same indulgence.^[16] The Amendment, though, is a prohibition against adopting rules based on age that deny or abridge the rights voters already have. Indeed, neither the Twenty-Sixth Amendment nor the related amendments we have been discussing are written in terms of granting a positive right to vote. Instead, they each are phrased in the negative, namely, that the right to vote shall not be denied or abridged based on the relevant reason. See DAVID SCHULTZ, ELECTION LAW AND DEMOCRATIC THEORY 87 (2016). More consistent with the text of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment is for us to evaluate whether younger voters' rights were reduced by the addition of a privilege for older voters.

The point just made, though, needs to take into account a possible exception. We return to the Bossier Parish decision concerning the Fifteenth Amendment. After stating that a baseline for measuring abridgements was necessary, the Court continued by distinguishing two parts of the Voting Rights Act. Section 5 proceedings, the since-invalidated requirement that certain states had to preclear any election law changes with the Department of Justice, "uniquely deal only and specifically with changes in voting procedures." Bossier Parish, 528 U.S. at 334 (emphasis omitted). On the other hand, challenges to voting practices generally, i.e., not necessarily a recent change, under Section 2 of the Act or under the Fifteenth Amendment, had a broader reach:

In § 2 or Fifteenth Amendment proceedings, by contrast, which involve not only changes but (much more commonly) the status quo itself, the comparison must be made with a hypothetical alternative: If the status quo "results in [an] abridgement of the right to vote" or "abridge[s] [the right to vote]" relative to what the right to vote ought to be, the status quo itself must be changed.

Id. The Court then stated that "abridging" for purposes of the Fifteenth Amendment refers to discrimination more generally, not just to retrogression. Id. That certainly makes sense, that litigation under the Fifteenth Amendment went far beyond just challenging recent changes but sought to dismantle longstanding discrimination in voting.

Even if this concept applies to the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, that abridging goes beyond just looking at the change but also at the validity of the state's voting rules generally, we see no basis to hold that Texas's absentee voting rules as a whole are something that ought not to be.

Secondly, we examine the two Supreme Court decisions on which plaintiffs rely in defining "abridge" in this manner. The earlier of the opinions used the Fifteenth Amendment to invalidate an Oklahoma voter registration system. Lane, 307 U.S. at 270, 275. When Oklahoma was admitted as a state in 1907, it imposed a literacy test that, because of how it was administered, effectively denied most black Oklahomans the right to vote. Id. at 269. The test was invalidated by the Supreme Court. Id. Oklahoma then devised a registration system providing that those who voted in the 1914 Oklahoma elections remained eligible thereafter, but those who did not vote but were eligible had to register within a 12-day window in 1916. Id. at 271. Thus, voters who had been eligible in 1914 had much different rules applied to them depending on their race. White voters who had not been subject to barriers of law or custom in 1914 remained eligible to vote, while black voters had a quickly opened, then closed, window for registration that few satisfied. The plaintiff was a black potential voter who had been old enough but failed to register in 1916; in 1934, he was rejected when he sought to register. Id. The Court invalidated the registration scheme, explaining that the Fifteenth Amendment prohibits "onerous procedural requirements which effectively handicap exercise of the franchise." Id. at 275. Plaintiffs latch on to the phrase "effectively handicap," but we fail to see that when Texas granted a privilege to older voters, it was reducing or handicapping the rights of younger voters. It failed to enhance rights for younger voters, but that is not the equivalent of abridging.

Three decades later, the Supreme Court held that Virginia abridged the right to vote in violation of the Twenty-Fourth Amendment when the state required voters to choose between paying a poll tax or filing a certificate of residence. Forsssenius, 380 U.S. at 531-33. Somewhat similarly to the Oklahoma response to invalidating literacy tests, Virginia adopted the alternatives because of the imminent prohibition of poll taxes for federal elections by the Twenty-Fourth Amendment. Id. at 531. Under the challenged state law, someone wishing to vote in a federal election could either pay the poll tax applicable to state elections or instead file every election year at least "six months before the election, a notarized or witnessed certificate attesting that they have been continuous residents of the State since the date of registration (which might have been many years before under Virginia's system of permanent registration) and that they do not presently intend to leave the city or county." Id. at 541. The Court held that to demonstrate the invalidity of the measure, "it need only be shown that it imposes a material requirement solely upon those who refuse to surrender their constitutional right to vote in federal elections without paying a poll tax." Id. The Twenty-Fourth Amendment eliminated "all requirements impairing the right to vote in federal elections by reason of failure to pay the poll tax," and Virginia could not impose the tax even just as an alternative. Id. at 544.

Forsssenius invalidated the law requiring voters choose between paying an unconstitutional tax or engaging in an onerous registration. The plaintiffs emphasize the Court's calling the registration an invalid "material requirement," but here, too, the plaintiffs seek more than can be found in one of the Court's opinions. The Twenty-Fourth Amendment provides that the right to vote in federal elections "shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason of failure to pay any poll tax or other tax." When Virginia imposed a material requirement of registration within a certain time period prior to every election, it did not grant a privilege to one class of voters while leaving other classes untouched. It was mandating that every voter either pay the poll tax or register. It was unconstitutional to require that choice.

Rejecting the plaintiffs' arguments, we hold that an election law abridges a person's right to vote for the purposes of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment only if it makes voting more difficult for that person than it was before the law was enacted or enforced. As the Court has held, the "core meaning" of "abridge" is to "shorten," and shortening "necessarily entails a comparison." Bossier Parish, 528 U.S. at 333-34. Abridgment of the right to vote applies to laws that place a barrier or prerequisite to voting, or otherwise make it more difficult to vote, relative to the baseline.

On the other hand, a law that makes it easier for others to vote does not abridge any person's right to vote for the purposes of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. That is not to say that a state may always enact such a law, but it does not violate the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

Sophisticated attempts to circumvent this rule could arise. The Supreme Court, though, has made clear that the voting-rights amendments "nullify] sophisticated as well as simple-minded modes of impairing the right guaranteed." See Forssenius, 380 U.S. at 540-41 (quotation marks omitted). Courts will be able to respond properly to any artful efforts.

We now examine some of the caselaw urged upon us by the plaintiffs. We have discussed Lane and Forssenius already and concluded they do not counsel a different approach. We now review some other decisions in which other courts considered claimed violations of the Fifteenth, Twenty-Fourth, or Twenty-Sixth Amendments. Soon after the Twenty-Sixth Amendment was ratified, the Supreme Court of California held that California's registration rule that compelled young voters living apart from their parents to retain their parents' voting residence violated the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. Jolicoeur v. Mihaly, 488 P.2d 1, 2 \(Cal. 1971\). That decision is not binding on this court, but we examine it for its persuasive value. The court held that the word "abridge" was defined as to "diminish, curtail, deprive, cut off, [or] reduce." Id. at 4. The registration rule compelled the newly enfranchised voters either to travel to their parents' district to register and vote, or to vote by absentee. Id. The court held that it was "clear" that the law "abridged petitioners' right to vote in precisely one of the ways that Congress sought to avoid — by singling minor voters out for special treatment and effectively making many of them vote by absentee ballot." Id. at 7. Unlike the generally older voters who were not in college, these students could not register to vote where they lived. We agree with Jolicoeur to the extent it means that a voting scheme that adds barriers primarily for younger voters constitutes an abridgement due to age.

We also consider a decision by the Supreme Court of Colorado, which held that the Twenty-Sixth Amendment applied to participation in a ballot-initiative process. Colo. Project-

Common Cause v. Anderson, 495 P.2d 220, 222-23 (Colo. 1972). The court invalidated a law that prevented persons younger than 21 years of age from signing and circulating petitions. Id. at 223. Although this case did not involve voting, the suit did involve prohibiting political participation based on age. We do not necessarily endorse using the Twenty-Sixth Amendment in this context, but the Colorado court's doing so does not create a result contrary to our holding here.

The final decision we examine is one that the district court cited in the present case. See United States v. Texas, 445 F. Supp. 1245 (S.D. Tex. 1978), aff'd sub nom. Symm v. United States, 439 U.S. 1105 (1979). That court applied strict scrutiny to a claim under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. Texas, 445 F. Supp. at 1261. There, a local county clerk refused to allow college students to register to vote, effectively disenfranchising 973 of the 1000 applicants. Id. at 1249. The district court held that this refusal violated the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. We do not disagree with the invalidation of this practice, but strict scrutiny was not necessary to do so. Further, the Supreme Court's summary affirmance is not a summary endorsement.

We hold, based on the meaning of the word "abridged," that the right to vote under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment is not abridged unless the challenged law creates a barrier to voting that makes it more difficult for the challenger to exercise her right to vote relative to the status quo, or unless the status quo itself is unconstitutional. Thus, conferring a privilege on one category of voters does not alone violate the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

C. The Texas Election Code and the Twenty-Sixth Amendment

It has taken much discussion, but we finally arrive at the dispositive question: Does Section 82.003 of the Texas Election Code deny the plaintiffs' rights during the pandemic? The statutory background for voting in Texas prior to election day is the following. Early voting was first permitted in 1917. In re Texas, 602 S.W.3d at 558. Gradually adding classes of voters to those who qualify for absentee voting, the state did not extend no-excuse absentee voting to persons 65 and older until 1975, after the adoption of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. Id. (citing Act of May 30, 1975, 64th Leg., R.S., ch. 682, § 5, 1975 Tex. Gen. Laws 2080, 2082). This right is now codified in the challenged Section 82.003.

We have indicated that adding the privilege to older voters to vote absentee without needing a statutory excuse did not deny or abridge the right to vote of anyone who was not similarly extended that privilege. Now, we must consider if the pandemic affects the propriety of the actions Texas has taken. The Secretary of State has been found to be a proper defendant. We do not examine the authority of that official to respond during the current viral crisis in a manner to alter the effect of Section 82.003. We have concluded that she has a sufficient connection for Ex parte Young purposes to enforcement of the Election Code, and we proceed no further now because such analysis is relevant only for the remedy. As we will explain, we conclude no remedy is appropriate under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

We have held that the Election Code provision itself neither denies nor abridges the right to vote. Therefore, it is only the failure by election officials to respond differently to the pandemic that could deny or abridge. The plaintiffs' argument is both that Section 82.003 "violates the clear text of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment" and it also creates a special burden during the pandemic on younger voters by forcing them to vote in person. Nothing more needs to be said about the textual argument. As to the effect of the pandemic, we start with what the Texas Supreme Court recently stated on this question. See id. at 552.

That court held that "a voter can take into consideration aspects of his health and his health history that are physical conditions in deciding whether, under the circumstances, to apply to vote by mail because of disability." Id. at 560. Further, "elected officials have placed in the hands of the voter the determination of whether in-person voting will cause a likelihood of injury due to a physical condition." Id. at 561. But "lack of immunity to COVID-19, without more, is not a 'disability' as defined by the Election Code." Id. at 550. Although "lack of immunity" alone is not a Section 82.002 disability, In re Texas shows that voters with an underlying physical condition, rather than fear of COVID-19 alone, may apply to vote by mail under that section. This undermines the plaintiffs' as-applied argument because at-risk voters of any age can utilize the Texas Election Code's disability provision to mitigate the risk of COVID-19. Of course, it does not permit all voters to claim that reasonable fear of exposure is a disability.

The record indicates Texas is taking the kinds of precautions for voting that are being used in other endeavors during the pandemic. None of them guarantees protection. There are quite reasonable concerns about voting in person, but the state's mandating that many voters continue to vote in that way does not amount to an absolute prohibition of the right to vote. As to abridgement, voters under age 65 did not have no-excuse absentee voting prior to the pandemic. Further, requiring many to vote in person during this crisis, with safety measures being imposed and some flexibility as to "disability" being shown, does not amount to an unconstitutional status quo. The real issue here is equal protection, and that is not before us.

We will remand. Before we send this case on its way, though, we pause to mention the concept of levels of scrutiny. The decision in June to grant a stay in this case was based on a holding that "employing McDonald's logic leads inescapably to the conclusion that rational-basis review applies." Tex. Democratic Party, 961 F.3d at 409 (citing McDonald, 394 U.S. at 807-08). The Supreme Court's 1969 McDonald opinion, predating the 1971 Amendment at the center of our analysis, was a challenge by pretrial detainees who were either charged with nonbailable offenses or could not afford bail. McDonald, 394 U.S. at 803. They had no right under Illinois law to an absentee ballot due to their detention, despite that they had not been convicted of the charged offenses. Id. The claim was that the state made an arbitrary distinction, violative of equal protection, between those physically incapacitated by illness who could vote absentee and those judicially incapacitated who could not. Id. at 806. The Court concluded that no heightened scrutiny was needed because the disputed distinctions were based neither on wealth nor race, and because they did not "impact" the detainees' "fundamental right to vote." Id. at 807. The right to vote had not been denied because there was no evidence that Illinois would not provide alternative means for the detainees to vote, as the state might "furnish the jails with special polling booths or facilities on election day, or provide guarded transportation to the polls themselves for certain inmates," or offer other options. Id. at 808 & n.6.

We are hesitant to hold that McDonald applies. One reason is that the decision predated the ratification of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, which means it did not consider the potential — argued by the plaintiffs here — that the Amendment requires the same heightened analysis as McDonald stated applied to classifications based on race and wealth. See id. at 807. Further, the Court seemed to analyze only whether the challenged action "den[ied] appellants the exercise of the franchise." Id. at 807-08. The Twenty-Sixth Amendment prohibits age-based denials but also abridgments of the right to vote. In addition, the Supreme Court interpreted a post-McDonald limitation on absentee voting as potentially violative of equal protection even though, like the statute in McDonald, it left open other options for voting. Am. Party of Tex. v. White, 415 U.S. 767, 794-95 \(1974\) (discussing McDonald). No party's brief cited American Party either to the motions panel or to us, and only an amicus brought it to our attention.

We have held there has been no denial or abridgement of a right to vote under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. On remand, equal protection questions may come to the fore. Though we cannot, in the current posture of this appeal, decide the issue of the proper scrutiny to give to this statutory provision under equal protection analysis, we need to take one further step so the issue can be considered on remand in light of this opinion. Before granting a stay, the motions panel had to decide the likelihood of the defendants' success on appeal on each of the grounds on which the district court relied in issuing a preliminary injunction. It held both that McDonald applied and that rational-basis review was appropriate. In our more limited opinion today, though, by concluding that no denial or abridgment of the right to vote under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment ever occurred, we had no denial or abridgement to scrutinize. We have uncertainties about McDonald and do not wish that the earlier necessity for a preliminary decision on the merits by the motions panel control the remand on an issue we never reached. We therefore use our authority as the panel resolving the merits to declare that the holdings in the motions panel opinion as to McDonald are not precedent.

To be clear, we are not stating, even as dicta, that rational basis scrutiny is incorrect. Indeed, age-based distinctions are evaluated in that manner in the usual case. See Mass. Bd. of Retirement v. Murgia, 427 U.S. 307, 312 \(1976\). On the other hand, some courts have applied what is known as the Anderson-Burdick balancing analysis to claims that an election law violates equal protection, and they provide noteworthy reasons for doing so. See, e.g., Luft v. Evers, 963 F.3d 665, 671 \(7th Cir. 2020\) (citing Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780 \(1983\), and Burdick v. Takushi, 504 U.S. 428 \(1992\)). The right level of scrutiny to an equal protection claim on remand is for the district court initially to analyze. An answer now by us would be only dicta. Even so, we state that we have not seen any authority to support that it would require strict scrutiny as the district court initially applied.

In sum, the plaintiffs based their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim on the argument that differential treatment in allowing voters aged 65 and older to vote by mail without excuse constitutes, at least during the pandemic, a denial or abridgment of a younger citizen's right to vote on account of age. This claim fails because adding a benefit to another class of voters does not deny or abridge the plaintiffs' Twenty-Sixth Amendment right to vote. The preliminary injunction was not properly granted on the plaintiffs' Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim as it has been defended in this appeal.

We VACATE the injunction and REMAND for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

CARL E. STEWART, Circuit Judge, concurring in part, dissenting in part.

Before us is an appeal of a preliminary injunction issued in July 2020 by the District Court in the Western District of Texas. The preliminary injunction required Texas officials to allow any Texan eligible to vote to do so by mail. In April, Plaintiffs filed this lawsuit requesting relief on seven grounds: race and language discrimination in violation of the Voting Rights Act, race discrimination and non-race discrimination in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, race discrimination in violation of the Fifteenth Amendment, denial of free speech under the First Amendment, denial of due process for vagueness, and violation of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction narrowed the claims. They argued that Texas's election statute, § 82.003 (allowing no-excuse voting for voters 65 and older) was void for vagueness and violated the First, Fourteenth, and Twenty-Sixth Amendments. After conducting a hearing, the district court determined in a seventy-three-page opinion that Plaintiffs were likely to succeed on all their claims, including their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, especially in light of the tremendous threat to public health posed by the COVID-19 pandemic. The district court noted that "COVID-19 has become one of the leading causes of death in the United States. Data to date in Texas demonstrates higher than expected infection rates in younger persons." Regarding the Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, the district court stated:

The Court concludes, that the COVID-19 pandemic, younger voters bear a disproportionate burden because the age restrictions of [§ 82.003], that [§ 82.003] is a government classification based on age and discriminates against voters under the age of 65 based on age, and that [§ 82.003] violates the [Twenty-Sixth] Amendment, as applied, during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Defendants appealed the preliminary injunction order and a motions panel of this court granted a motion to stay the injunction pending appeal. Texas Democratic Party v. Abbott, 961 F.3d 389 \(5th Cir. 2020\). The panel noted that § 82.003 "facially discriminates on the basis of age," id. at 402, but concluded that the state officials were likely to show that the statute's "age distinction survives." Id. at 406.

The issue before us now on appeal is whether the district court erred in issuing this preliminary injunction, and to resolve this appeal, we must consider three jurisdictional arguments: whether Plaintiffs have standing, whether Defendants can claim sovereign immunity, and whether this lawsuit poses a nonjusticiable political question. As to the merits, we must determine whether the court erred when it determined that Plaintiffs were likely to succeed on their Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, as applied.

The panel majority ably considers these jurisdictional questions, and I concur in their resolution of these threshold issues. However, because I differ with the panel majority in their determination that § 82.003 does not violate the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, I dissent as to that claim.

A district court's ultimate decision to issue a preliminary injunction is reviewed for abuse of discretion, but "a decision grounded in erroneous legal principles is reviewed de novo." Women's Med. Ctr. of Nw. Hous. v. Bell, 248 F.3d 411, 419 (5th Cir. 2001). A plaintiff must establish four elements to secure a preliminary injunction:

(1) a substantial likelihood of success on the merits, (2) a substantial threat of irreparable injury if the injunction is not issued, (3) that the threatened injury if the injunction is denied outweighs any harm that will result if the injunction is granted, and (4) that the grant of an injunction will not disserve the public interest.

See Speaks v. Kruse, 445 F.3d 396, 399-400 (5th Cir. 2006).

The statute in question facially discriminates based on age, which in the context of the pandemic leads to dramatically different outcomes for different age groups. A consideration of the statute under the plain text of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment leads me to conclude that the statute, as applied during the pandemic, is likely unconstitutional and that therefore the district court did not err in determining Plaintiffs have a substantial likelihood of success on the merits. I further conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion in deciding that the other three factors were met and in issuing the preliminary injunction. Therefore, I respectfully dissent.

I. Twenty-Sixth Amendment Analysis

"The right of citizens of the United States, who are eighteen years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age." U.S. Const. amend. XXVI, § 1. Though few courts have interpreted the meaning of "denied or abridged" in the context of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, the phrase has been interpreted in the context of the Fifteenth and Nineteenth Amendments. In the absence of an unambiguous definition, much effort has been devoted to unearthing the legislative history of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. In my view, neither precedent nor legislative history compels a narrow definition of "abridged."

Neither party argues that Section 82.003 denies individuals the right to vote by permitting some individuals to vote via mail-in ballot. Plaintiffs argue that the statute abridges voting rights through a facial classification that permits individuals 65 years and older to vote via mail-in ballot. Defendants argue on appeal that the statute does not abridge the right to vote by giving the benefit of mail-in ballots to certain members of the electorate. The definition of abridge is central to this appeal.

As the panel majority notes, Black's Law Dictionary defines abridge as "No reduce or diminish." Abridge, Black's Law Dictionary 7 (10th ed. 2014). The panel majority concludes that because no voter is made worse off by Texas's mail-in ballot provisions, the State of Texas has not abridged voting rights. The panel majority holds that "an election law abridges a person's right to vote for the purpose of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment only if it makes voting more difficult for that person than it was before the law was enacted or enforced."

Precedent supports a different outcome. The panel majority cites Reno v. Bossier Parish School for the proposition that "abridge" requires a comparison to a baseline. See 528 U.S. 320, 334 \(2000\) (discussing the use of baseline comparisons in preclearance proceedings under § 5 of the Voting Rights Act); see Maj. Op. at 27. They further explain that plaintiffs cannot prevail under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment without proof that their voting rights were reduced by the addition of a privilege for older voters. See Maj. Op. at 33 (emphasis added). What the panel majority refers to as a privilege here has been recognized as a right in other contexts. See Am. Party of Tex. v. White, 415 U.S. 764, 796 \(1974\) (holding that a state's decision to only offer absentee ballots to major party primary voters violated the Equal Protection Clause).

Furthermore, the panel majority misreads Reno. While Reno holds that the appropriate comparison in preclearance proceedings is between the status quo and the proposed changes, Reno expressly identifies a broader definition of abridge within § 2 of the Voting Rights Act and the Fifteenth Amendment. Reno, 528 U.S. at 334. In the context of the Fifteenth Amendment, Reno indicates that the proper comparison is a hypothetical one—one between the status quo and what the hypothetical right to vote "ought to be". Id. "If the status quo 'results in [an] abridgement of the right to vote' or 'abridge[s] [the right to vote]' relative to what the right to vote ought to be, the status quo itself must be changed." Id. Luft v. Evers considered Reno and persuasively offered what the baseline should be in cases challenging voter qualification and election mechanisms—an equal opportunity to participate. 963 F.3d 665, 672 \(7th Cir. 2020\) (citing Reno, 528 U.S. at 334).

Section 82.003 fails to treat members of the electorate equally with regard to mail-in voting. This unequal treatment is discriminatory in normal times and dangerous in the time of a global pandemic. Though all individuals can seemingly vote in person, those without the opportunity to vote by mail have less opportunity to participate than others. Though Luft interpreted § 2 of the Voting Rights Act in respect to protected classes, there is little reason to think the term "abridge" should carry a distinct meaning within the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

In South Carolina v. Katzenbach,^[1] the Supreme Court held that Congress has broad authority to enforce § 1 of the Fifteenth Amendment ("the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."). 383 U.S. 301, 325 \(1966\). The Court stated that § 1 "has always been treated as self-executing and has repeatedly been construed, without further legislative specification, to invalidate state voting qualifications or procedures which are discriminator, on their face or in practice." Id. at 305 (emphasis added). Though Katzenbach predates the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, § 1 of the Fifteenth Amendment and § 1 of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment both include language prohibiting states from denying or abridging the right to vote. Katzenbach interprets "deny or abridge" as invalidating procedures that are facially discriminatory or applied in a discriminatory manner with regard to race. Katzenbach does not cabin its language to the word "deny" but rather interprets the phrase in total to prevent an array of discriminatory practices including facial classifications. Katzenbach supports a broad understanding of "deny or abridge" that is inconsistent with the panel majority's holding.

The Seventh Circuit also construed "denial or abridgment" in the context of § 2(a) of the Voting Rights Act. Luft v. Evers, 963 F.3d at 672. The court states that § 2 was violated when the voting system was "not equally open to participation by members of a protected class so that groups members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate." Id. The court recognized an equality requirement in § 2(b) of the Voting Rights Act that requires states to treat voters equally with regard to their opportunity to participate in the electoral process. Id.

Reno, Katzenbach, and Luft persuade me to read "denial or abridge" in the Twenty-Sixth Amendment as generally prohibiting states from depriving individuals of the equal opportunity to vote based on a protected status. The panel majority does not cite any case that compels an understanding of "abridge" in the context of a voting rights amendment that requires a plaintiff's position to be worsened. Though the panel majority relies on Lane v. Wilson and an "onerous procedural requirement" as violative of the Fifteenth Amendment, the Supreme Court does not state that such an onerous procedural requirement is necessary to find abridgment. 307 U.S. 268, 275 \(1939\). In fact, Lane states that "[t]he Amendment nullifies sophisticated as well as simple-minded modes of discrimination." Id. In this case, we have straightforward facial discrimination, while Lane dealt with a complicated scheme with severely discriminatory impacts without a facial classification.

The panel majority also cites Harman v. Forssenius, which similarly outlines an unconstitutional method of burdening voters. 380 U.S. 528 \(1965\). Harman also cites Lane for the proposition that the Twenty-Fourth Amendment "nullifies sophisticated as well as simple-minded modes of impairing the right guaranteed." Id. at 540-41 (internal quotations omitted). Harman concludes that the Twenty-Fourth Amendment does not require an outright poll tax, but that a violation can be found if it is shown that the statute "imposes a material requirement solely upon those who refuse to surrender their constitutional right to vote in federal elections without paying a poll tax." Id. at 541. In this case, I see both a facial classification and a material requirement to vote in person imposed on younger voters. Harman seems to stand for the proposition that this material requirement suffices when the statute itself does not plainly violate the Amendment but does not suggest that it is necessary.

Suffice it to say, I respectfully differ with my panel colleagues about how these Supreme Court cases should be read and construed in the context of this case.

Though the legislative history here is unclear, there are more legislative arguments in favor of construing "abridge" broadly than there are in favor of construing the term narrowly. On balance, I conclude that the legislative history does not favor the panel majority's holding.

In 1970, Congress attempted to lower the voting age from 21 to 18, which was invalidated in Oregon v. Mitchell. Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1970, Pub. L. No. 91-285, § 302, 84 Stat. 314, 318, invalidated in part by Oregon v. Mitchell, 400 U.S. 112 \(1970\). The Twenty-Sixth Amendment was ratified the following year. Eric S. Fish, Note, The Twenty-Sixth Amendment Enforcement Power, 121 Yale L.J. 1168, 1194-95 (2012). The Twenty-Sixth Amendment did more than merely raise the voting age in a constitutionally permissible manner. Congress's 1970 effort to lower the voting age stated:

Except as required by the Constitution, no citizen of the United States who is otherwise qualified to vote in any State or political subdivision in any primary or in any election shall be denied the right to vote in any such primary or election on account of age if such citizen is eighteen years of age or older.

Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1970, Pub. L. No. 91-285, § 302, 84 Stat. 314, 318, invalidated in part by Oregon v. Mitchell, 400 U.S. 112 \(1970\).

Several legislators expressed the intent to have the Twenty-Sixth Amendment create protections against discrimination akin to those in the Fifteenth and Nineteenth Amendments. See, e.g., 117 Cong. Rec. H7534 (daily ed. March 23, 1971) (statement of Rep. Richard Poff) ("What does the proposed constitutional amendment accomplish? It does not grant the right to vote to all citizens 18 years of age or older. Rather, it guarantees that citizens who are 18 years of age or older shall not be discriminated against on account of age. Just as the 15th amendment prohibits racial discrimination in voting and just as the 19th amendment prohibits sex discrimination in voting, the proposed amendment would prohibit age discrimination in voting . . . In this regard, the proposed amendment would protect not only an 18-year-old, but also the 88-year-old . . .") (emphasis added); 117 Cong. Rec. H7539 (daily ed. Mar. 23, 1971) (statement of Rep. Claude Pepper) ("What we propose to do . . . is exactly what we did in . . . the 15th amendment and . . . the 19th amendment . . ."; see also id. at H7533 (Rep. Emanuel Celler noting that the Twenty-Sixth Amendment is "modeled after similar provisions in the 15th amendment . . . and the 19th amendment . . .").

The content and naming of the 1970 Voting Rights Amendment also indicates that Congress considered regularized access to absentee ballots a significant part of "voting rights." § 5 of the Voting Rights Act concerned evaluating practices and procedures for potential abridgement, and most likely the method by which a person is permitted to vote would constitute such a practice or procedure. This persuades me that the right to vote should be construed more broadly than the mere right to cast a ballot in person.

The panel majority relies on various aspects of statutory and legislative history as support for its holding. The panel majority also cites McDonald v. Board of Election Commissioners of Chicago for the proposition that the framers understood the right to vote as the right to cast a ballot. 394 U.S. 802, 807 \(1969\). I am unpersuaded that McDonald controls the outcome of this case. McDonald affirmed a summary judgment grant in favor of Illinois on inmates' Equal Protection Claims. Id. at 809, 810. The inmates argued that their rights were violated by the state's refusal to provide them with mail-in ballots, and the court granted the motion noting that there was "nothing in the record to indicate that the Illinois statutory scheme has an impact on appellants' ability to exercise the fundamental right to vote." Id. at 807. McDonald is a limited holding on its own terms because it is based on a lack of evidence in the record. To be sure, McDonald has not been overruled by the Supreme Court. However, that truism is unremarkable; the Court does not routinely overrule its cases. The point is that McDonald has limited vitality for the purposes of this appeal.

Beyond McDonald's limited scope, the Supreme Court has limited McDonald at least three times. See Goosby v. Osser, 409 U.S. 512, 521-22 \(1973\) (discussion of McDonald's inapplicability in a situation where there was greater evidence); see O'Brien

v. Skinner, 414 U.S. 524, 529 (1974) (same); see Am. Party 415 U.S. at 794-95. American Party held that Texas violated the Fourteenth Amendment by allowing some party primary voters to cast absentee ballots while requiring other party primary voters to vote in person. Id. at 794.

I conclude that the options granted to voters to cast their vote are part of "the right to vote" under the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. By giving younger voters fewer options, especially in the context of a dangerous pandemic where in-person voting is risky to public health and safety, their voting rights are abridged in relation to older voters who do not face this burden.^[2] This implicates the Twenty-Sixth Amendment.

II. Scrutiny Analysis

As the panel majority observes, there remains a question of what level of scrutiny the district court should have applied to § 82.003. In McDonald, the Supreme Court applied rational-basis review to a law burdening the right to vote by mail. 394 U.S. at 808-09.^[3] But in Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780 (1983) and Burdick v. Takusi, 504 U.S. 428 (1992), the Supreme Court articulated a framework that "applies strict scrutiny to a State's law that severely burdens ballot access and intermediate scrutiny to a law that imposes lesser burdens." Esshaki v. Whitmer, 813 F. App'x 170, 171 (6th Cir. 2020).

Even if strict scrutiny is not the appropriate standard to be applied here, as the district court applied to Plaintiffs' Twenty-Sixth Amendment claim, Defendants have not identified an interest in the application of § 82.003 during the pandemic that would allow that application to withstand any level of judicial review. Defendants argue that Texas's interest in preventing voter fraud justifies its limitations of voting by mail to individuals 65 years or older, but they do not present any evidence, let alone argue, that voters 64 years or younger present any more risk of committing voter fraud than those over that age threshold. Indeed, the risk of fraud is exceedingly rare. As the district court found, between 2005 and 2018, there were just 73 prosecutions of voter fraud in Texas out of millions of votes casted. In two-thirds of the states, any qualified voter can vote absentee without providing an excuse. National Conference of State Legislatures, Voting Outside the polling Place: Absentee, All-Mail and Other Voting at Home Options, <https://www.ncsl.org/research/elections-and-campaigns/absentee-and-early-voting.aspx>. However, "[n]one of these states have experienced widespread fraud as a result of mail-in voting." NAACP Legal Defense Fund Br. 16 n.18 (citing The Brennan Center, The False Narrative of Vote-by-Mail Fraud, <https://www.brennancenter.org/our-work/analysis-opinion/falsenarrative-vote-mail-fraud>). Hence, I am not convinced that allowing the district court's order to stand would cause "widespread voter fraud and election chaos." See Tarrant Cty. GOP Br. 1-2.

To the extent there is any risk of voter fraud, Texas has mechanisms in place to protect the integrity of its elections. For instance, to obtain an absentee ballot, a Texas voter must provide identifying information, under penalty of perjury, that allows election officials to confirm the applicant is eligible to vote. See Elections Adm'rs and Cty. Br. 10 (citing Tex. Elec. Code § 84.001). Texas also has a variety of criminal sanctions available to deter any misuse of absentee ballots. See, e.g., Tex. Elec. Code § 84.0041 (providing that a person is liable for "intentionally caus[ing] false information to be provided on an application for ballot by mail"), 276.013 (providing that an individual is liable for knowingly or intentionally causing a ballot to be obtained under false pretenses).

Given the dearth of evidence of voter fraud and the ample tools available to promote election integrity, Defendants have not identified a legitimate government interest in enforcing § 82.003 within the context of a global pandemic.

III. Remaining Preliminary Injunction Factors

As Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their argument that § 82.003 violates the Twenty-Sixth Amendment for the aforementioned reasons, I now turn to the other injunction factors.

The district court concluded that Plaintiffs faced a substantial threat of irreparable injury, noting the serious dangers posed by in-person voting during the pandemic. The district court found that the threatened harm if the injunction is denied outweighs Defendants' concerns about voter fraud, which the district court determined were "unsupported." The district court finally determined that granting the injunction was in the public interest by safeguarding constitutional rights and limiting the spread of disease. The district court did not abuse its discretion in reaching these findings.

The preliminary injunction was properly issued, and for that reason, I respectfully dissent.

[1] In their request for a preliminary injunction, the plaintiffs limited the Twenty-Sixth Amendment grounds to an as-applied challenge seeking relief "[t]o the extent that the state [was] purporting, in these pandemic circumstances, to apply different voting burdens based on the voter's age."

[2] The plaintiffs stated they wished to preserve the right to pursue permanent relief on their other claims and argued that, if we were to reverse the district court on the application of the Twenty-Sixth Amendment, we should vacate the injunction and remand to the district court for further proceedings. That is what we do.

[3] The most we see are the following. On one page of the plaintiffs' brief, they argue that it is unconstitutional to require those younger than 65 to appear at the polls "particularly during the COVID-19 pandemic, while allowing over-65 voters to cast ballots from the safety of their homes." Appellee's Br. 27 (citing Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528, 542 \(1965\), and Lane v. Wilson, 307 U.S. 268, 275 \(1939\)). A few pages later, the plaintiffs reject the defendants' argument that the legislature would rather nobody vote by mail than for everyone to do so; instead, they argue that nothing supports that the legislature would not wish to "extend that right on a nondiscriminatory basis during the COVID-19 pandemic (which is the only period relevant for the preliminary injunction now before this Court)." Id. at 34.

[4] An appellant's failure to raise an issue in an initial appeal constitutes a waiver of having the issue considered on remand; not so for the appellee. United States v. Smith, 814 F.3d 268, 272 \(5th Cir. 2016\). This is a component of the law-of-the-case doctrine. See 18B Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Edward H. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4478.6 (2d ed. April 2020 Update). Simply put, as to waiver, the rules for appellants and appellees are not identical.

[5] Compare U.S. CONST. amend. XXVI, §§ 1-2 ("The right of citizens of the United States, who are eighteen years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."); with U.S. CONST. amend. XV, §§ 1-2 ("The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."); and U.S. CONST. amend. XIX ("The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."); and U.S. CONST. amend. XXIV, §§ 1-2 ("The right of citizens of the United States to vote in any primary or other election for President or Vice President, for electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Representative in Congress, shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason of failure to pay any poll tax or other tax. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.").

[6] Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1970, Pub. L. No. 91-285, § 302, 84 Stat. 314, 318, invalidated in part by Oregon v. Mitchell, 400 U.S. 112 (1970).

[7] Nancy Turner, Comment, The Young and the Restless: How the Twenty-Sixth Amendment Could Play a Role in the Current Debate over Voting Laws, 64 AM. U. L. REV. 1503, 1508 (2015).

[8] Eric S. Fish, Note, The Twenty-Sixth Amendment Enforcement Power, 121 YALE L.J. 1168, 1193 (2012).

[9] Id. at 1194-95.

[10] Note, The Submerged Constitutional Right to an Absentee Ballot, 72 MICH. L. REV. 157, 159-61 (1973). Very similar data through 1969 was prepared for Congress as shown in the record of Senate hearings cited in the article. Id. at 158 n.3. That data provides the absentee voting landscape from each state based on two compilations by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress. Amendments to the Voting Rights Act of 1965: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Constitutional Rights of the Comm. on the Judiciary on S. 818, S. 2456, S. 2507, and Title IV of S. 2029, 91st Cong., 1st & 2d Sess. 292-93 (1969-70) (citing ELIZABETH YADLOSKY, LEGIS. REFERENCE SERV., 69-226A, ABSENTEE REGISTRATION AND VOTING: DIGESTS OF MAJOR PROVISIONS OF THE LAWS OF THE FIFTY STATES AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA (1969), and ELIZABETH YADLOSKY, LEGIS. REFERENCE SERV., A-243, ELECTION LAWS OF THE FIFTY STATES AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA (1968)). Our thanks to Stuart Carmody of the Congressional Research Service — with Ryan Annison of Senator Roger Wicker's staff as liaison — and to Fifth Circuit Librarians Judy Reedy, Peggy Mitts, and Susan Jones for diligently seeking and obtaining these two long-buried documents.

[11] Submerged Constitutional Right, supra note 10, at 161 n.18 (Arizona, Michigan, Rhode Island, and Wyoming in 1973); ELECTION LAWS OF THE FIFTY STATES AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, supra note 10, at 128 (Michigan); id. at 221 (Rhode Island).

[12] Submerged Constitutional Right, supra note 10, at 159-61 (footnotes omitted).

[13] Some states allowed absentee voting for election workers. ELECTION LAWS OF THE FIFTY STATES AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, supra note 10, at 52 (Florida); id. at 74 (Illinois); id. at 128 (Michigan). Others allowed absentee voting for religious reasons. Id. at 25 (California); id. at 36-37 (Connecticut); id. at 275 (Wisconsin). Many single-state variations existed, such as Mississippi allowing absentee voting for those engaged in transportation service as an actual driver, operator, or crewman. Id. at 137.

[14] Submerged Constitutional Right, supra note 10, at 160.

[15] Addressed later is the specific assertion in support of the preliminary injunction that the privilege abridges the younger voters' right in the context of the pandemic.

[16] We borrow the term "indulgence" from Justice Scalia, who used it to refer to accommodations offered to some but not all voters based on a perceived special need. Crawford v. Marion Cy. Election Bd., 553 U.S. 181, 209 (2008) (Scalia, J., concurring).

[1] South Carolina v. Katzenbach refused to invalidate § 5 of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which required that for certain jurisdictions to make changes to a "standard, practice, or procedure with respect to voting," they must seek a declaratory judgment that those policy changes do not have the purpose or effect of abridging or denying the right to vote on the basis of race. 383 U.S. 301, 337 (1966) (quoting 42 U.S.C. § 1973c(a)). The Supreme Court has since held that the formula of the Voting Rights Act which determines if a state is covered is unconstitutional but declined to issue a holding on § 5 itself. Shelby Cy. Ala. v. Holder, 570 U.S. 529, 556 (2013).

[2] The burden is severe. During the primaries, the pandemic led to a shortage in polling workers as individuals seek to avoid exposure to COVID-19. Elections Adm'rs and Cty. Br. at 23. Moreover, "securing an adequate number of polling places has been a challenge" since facilities that normally serve as election precincts are not large enough to accommodate social distancing. Id. This in turn has led to crowding and long lines at the polls, which increased the risk of exposure to the virus. Id. 22-23. And more people have gotten sick. For instance, following the Wisconsin primary, health officials identified 52 people who tested positive for COVID-19 after either voting in person or working at a polling site. NAACP Legal Defense Fund Br. at 12 (citing The Latest: 52 Positive Cases Tied to Wisconsin Election, The Associated Press (Apr. 28, 2020), <https://apnews.com/b1503b5591c682530d1005e58ec8c267>). Other individuals may have contracted the virus while voting, but were never tested. There is reason to think that forcing millions of voters under the age of 65 to vote in person on November 3, 2020 may place them in significant danger.

[3] In addition to the reasons offered by the panel majority for why rational basis may not be the correct standard of review here, I agree with then Chief Judge Frank Coffin who opined: "It is difficult to believe that [the Twenty-Sixth Amendment] contributes no added protection to that already offered by the Fourteenth Amendment" for age discrimination. See Walgren v. Bd. of Selectmen of Town of Amherst, 519 F.2d 1364, 1367 (1st Cir. 1975). Consequently, a heightened standard of review is likely warranted here.

THE STATE OF TEXAS, Appellant,
v.
CHRIS HOLLINS, IN HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY AS HARRIS COUNTY
CLERK, Appellee.

No. 14-20-00627-CV.

Court of Appeals of Texas, Fourteenth District, Houston.

Memorandum Opinion filed September 18, 2020.

On Appeal from the 127th District Court, Harris County, Texas, Trial Court Cause No. 2020-52383.

Affirmed.

Panel consists of Justices Spain, Hassan, and Poissant.

MEMORANDUM OPINION

PER CURIAM.

This is an accelerated appeal from an interlocutory order denying appellant's application for temporary injunction. Appellant, the State of Texas, contends the trial court abused its discretion in denying its application for temporary injunction. We conclude the State did not meet its burden of proof and affirm the order of the trial court denying the State's application for temporary injunction.

I. Background

On August 25, 2020, the Harris County Clerk, Chris Hollins, posted a public message on the verified Twitter account of the "Harris County Clerk," stating that the Harris County Clerk's Office would be mailing every registered voter an application to vote by mail. Two days later, Keith Ingram, the Director of Elections for the Secretary of State, sent a letter to Hollins stating that Hollins's proposed plan constituted an abuse of voters' rights under Election Code section 31.005.^[1] Ingram directed Hollins to "immediately halt any plan to send an application for ballot by mail to all registered voters."

Ingram and Hollins spoke by telephone on August 31 wherein Hollins informed Ingram he declined to conform to Ingram's request. On that same day, the State filed an application for temporary restraining order, temporary injunction, and permanent injunction in the district court seeking to prohibit Hollins from mailing out vote-by-mail applications to all Harris County registered voters. The State's complaint was that Hollins's proposed plan was an ultra vires act not connected to his official duties as the Harris County Clerk and that such conduct would result in irreparable harm to Texas citizens.

On September 9, 2020, the 127th District Court held a hearing on the State's application in which Ingram and Hollins both testified. During the hearing, the State argued that Hollins's proposal was outside the scope of Hollins's authority as early voting clerk and would cause confusion among voters, ultimately inducing some voters to commit felony voter fraud. Ingram testified that by sending the application to voters who might not qualify to vote by mail, the clerk was "walking them into a felony." Ingram explained that section 84.0041 of the Election Code provides that if a voter knowingly or intentionally submits false information on an application to vote by mail, that voter is subject to prosecution for a state jail felony. See Tex. Elec. Code Ann. § 84.0041. The State did not take issue with Hollins sending the applications to voters aged 65 years or older because, it argued, there is no chance of confusion with these voters as their age alone (with no other personal determination by the voter) qualifies them to vote by mail.^[2] In response, Hollins emphasized the educational nature of the materials sent with the applications, specifically, the red-siren graphics accompanying a warning that, despite receiving the application, not all voters are eligible to vote by mail. Hollins's proposed mailer is depicted below:

The mailer containing the application states, "DO YOU QUALIFY TO VOTE BY MAIL?" in large capital letters and bold font, and specifically instructs the voter to "READ THIS BEFORE APPLYING FOR A MAIL BALLOT." The mailer then lists the four categories of voters that are qualified to vote by mail pursuant to the Election Code. See Tex. Elec. Code Ann. §§ 82.001-82.004. The mailer explains the disability qualification by citing language from the Texas Supreme Court's opinion in In re State, 602 S.W.3d 549 (Tex. 2020). While Ingram commended Hollins on the informational nature of the mailer, stating, "I've read this full mailer and I think it's very good," he disapproved of including an application in the mailer.

The trial court denied the State's motion for temporary injunction. This interlocutory appeal followed.

II. Analysis

A. Applicable Law and Standard of Review

"A temporary injunction's purpose is to preserve the status quo of the litigation's subject matter pending a trial on the merits." Butnaru v. Ford Motor Co., 84 S.W.3d 198, 204 \(Tex. 2002\); [Conrad Constr. Co., Ltd. v. Freedman's Town Pres. Coal., 491 S.W.3d 12, 15 \(Tex. App.-Houston \[14th Dist.\] 2016, no pet.\)](#). "A temporary injunction is an extraordinary remedy and does not issue as a matter of right." Butnaru, 84 S.W.3d at 204. To obtain a temporary injunction, the applicant must plead and prove: (1) a cause of action against the defendant; (2) a probable right to the relief sought; and (3) a probable, imminent, and irreparable injury in the interim. Id.; Conrad Constr., 491 S.W.3d at 15. The applicant bears the burden of production to offer some evidence of each of these elements. Conrad Constr., 491 S.W.3d at 15.

Whether to grant or deny a temporary injunction rests within the trial court's sound discretion. Butnaru, 84 S.W.3d at 204; Conrad Constr., 491 S.W.3d at 16. We should reverse an order on injunctive relief only if the trial court abused that discretion. Butnaru, 84 S.W.3d at 204.

B. The State failed to meet its burden to prove "probable, imminent, and irreparable injury."

In its brief, the State articulates a single issue:

For over a century, the Supreme Court has held that county officials have only those powers specifically granted or necessarily implied by the Legislature. Contrary to that well-established law, the trial court held that because no law forbids election clerks from sending unsolicited mail-in ballots, they must have authority to do so. The issue presented is whether this was a misinterpretation of the law and therefore an abuse of discretion.

The temporary injunction applicant, here the State, bears the burden to offer some evidence on each element of a temporary injunction. Conrad Constr., 491 S.W.3d at 15. The State alleged the following to show harm: (1) inherent harm to the State in its sovereign capacity and (2) voter confusion leading to felony voter fraud. We address these in turn.

1. Harm in the Sovereign Capacity

The State argues that under Yett v. Cook, it need only establish that Hollins's plan would be ultra vires to establish an injury. See Yett v. Cook, 281 S.W. 837, 842 \(Tex. 1926\). Yett merely establishes that the State has standing to assert an ultra vires claim in a mandamus proceeding, not that an ultra vires action is harmful by its very nature. See id. at 220-221. The State also cites to Texas Association of Business v. City of Austin, for the proposition that its alleged ultra vires claim results in automatic harm to the State. See Tex. Assoc. of Bus. v. City of Austin, 565 S.W.3d 425, 441 \(Tex. App.-Austin 2018, pet. denied\). In that case, the Austin Court of Appeals found the State would suffer harm if a proposed municipal ordinance that was directly preempted by a state law was put into effect. See id. at 441. There was no claim of ultra vires conduct in that case. We are not persuaded by the State's argument that ultra vires conduct automatically results in harm to the sovereign as a matter of law.

2. Voter Confusion

At the preliminary injunction hearing, Ingram testified that, "We don't allow or disallow counties to do anything. Counties are the ones that run elections in Texas, we assist and advise. The limited exception to that is whenever a county election official is abusing voters by misleading them and walking them into a felony." Thus, the State reveals its ultra vires argument is reduced to a single proposition: that the Harris County Clerk, by sending an informational brochure with an application to vote by mail, is misleading voters and potentially "walking them into a felony."

The thrust of the State's argument regarding harm resulting from voter confusion is that voters will be unable to follow the directions on the mailer, erroneously designate themselves qualified to vote by mail, and thus become subject to prosecution for felony voter fraud under section 84.0041 of the Election Code. See Tex. Elec. Code Ann. § 84.0041. The State emphasizes that the application sent by the Harris County Clerk (as opposed to applications sent by third-party groups, such as the League of Women Voters) connotes a certain level of official imprimatur that would lead voters to believe they have been sanctioned and approved to fill out the application. However, this argument supports the opposite conclusion. For example, when a voter sees an application sent by the County Clerk with its official imprimatur, red sirens, and directions regarding when a voter is and (more importantly) is not qualified to receive a mail-in ballot (instructions that are not required to be sent with third-party unsolicited mail-in ballot applications), it is more likely a voter would know to take this application seriously, to read all warnings, and to follow all stated precautions.

Further, the testimony at the injunction hearing revealed that the Secretary of State's website itself does not define disability, leaving voters without guidance. Conversely, the mailer includes information that helps voters determine whether they are disabled under Texas law for the purposes of voting by mail, including important details about the Texas Supreme Court's ruling clarifying the qualifications for a disability that would allow a registered voter to vote by mail.

When the trial court asked Ingram how many Chapter 84 indictments had been prosecuted in the last 20 years, Ingram responded (on multiple occasions) that he did not know. Further, when the trial court questioned Ingram about the mens rea elements of section 84.0041, Ingram confirmed that a voter would need to act intentionally or with knowledge of his or her fraudulent conduct to be found liable under that section. A mere accidental misinterpretation of "disability," for example, would not subject a voter to liability. When Hollins's counsel questioned Ingram how a voter would knowingly and intentionally violate the statute given all the information on the mailer, Ingram replied:

I don't know the answer to that question. I mean, for most voters, I agree this is sufficient, but not for all of them. And if they have the attitude, well, I'm not really disabled, but nobody is checking so I'm going to do it then that is exactly what 84.0041 is. And I've got the application in my hand and the Clerk sent it to me.

Ingram's response informs this court that "most" voters will have enough information to decide whether to apply to vote by mail, and only a select few, if any, will knowingly choose to break the law and falsify their application. A voter who intends to engage in fraud may just as easily do so with an application received from a third-party as it would with an application received from the Harris County Clerk. Mr. Ingram testified at the hearing that, "definitely some mailers have that kind of language [regarding qualifications to vote by mail] on them but not all of them — not very many of them." As discussed above, a voter would be less likely to engage in fraud using the application sent by the County Clerk because it has an official imprimatur, contains extensive explanations for what qualifies a voter to receive a mail ballot under the law, and is accompanied by text and red-siren graphics traditionally associated with danger and caution in general.

The State failed to meet its burden of showing that mailing the applications will result in irreparable injury. The injury alleged by the State is at best speculative. The State's argument is based on mere conjecture; there is, in this record, no proof that voters will intentionally violate the Election Code and no proof that voters will fail to understand the mailer and intentionally commit a felony, or be aided by the election official in doing so. Ingram's conclusory testimony at the temporary injunction hearing cannot carry the burden the State was required to prove to show actual harm. Conclusory testimony does not raise a genuine issue of material fact. Elizondo v. Krist, 415 S.W.3d 259, 264 \(Tex. 2013\) ("A conclusory statement of an expert witness is insufficient to create a question of fact to defeat summary judgment.") (internal quotations and citation omitted); Davis v. Knott, No. 14-17-00257-CV, 2019 WL 438788, at *9 (Tex. App.-Houston [14th Dist.] Feb. 5, 2019, pet. denied) ("A conclusory statement is one that expresses a factual inference without providing underlying facts in support of the conclusion.") (citing Arkoma Basin Expl. Co. v. FMF Assocs. 1990-A, Ltd., 249 S.W.3d 380, 389 n.32 (Tex. 2008) and [Dolcefino v. Randolph, 19 S.W.3d 906, 930 & n.21 \(Tex. App.-Houston \[14th Dist.\] 2000, pet. denied\)](#) (holding affidavit's statement that "this was false and defamatory and has injured me in my profession" was conclusory)).

An injunction is not proper when the claimed injury is merely speculative; fear and apprehension of injury are not sufficient to support a temporary injunction. Fox v. Tropical Warehouses, Inc., 121 S.W.3d 853, 861 \(Tex. App.-Fort Worth 2003, no pet.\). Accordingly, the trial court properly denied the State's application for temporary injunction.

Further, the temporary injunction applicant bears the burden of producing some evidence on each element of a temporary injunction. Conrad Constr., 491 S.W.3d at 15. Because the State fails to produce evidence of irreparable injury, we need not address the State's arguments regarding cause of action or probable success on the merits. See id.

We overrule the State's sole issue.

C. Judicial Non-Intervention

"The rule is well established in Texas that the equitable powers of the courts may not be invoked to interfere with public officials in taking any of the steps involved in an election." Ellis v. Vanderslice, 486 S.W.2d 155, 159 \(Tex. Civ. App.-Dallas 1972, no writ\) (citing City of Dallas v. Dallas Consol. Elec. St. Ry. Co., 105 Tex. 337, 341-42, 148

S.W. 292, 294 (1912); Leslie v. Griffin, 25 S.W.2d 820, 821 (Tex. Comm'n App. 1930); and Winder v. King, 1 S.W.2d 587, 589 (Tex. Comm'n App. 1928). "The question is not simply whether a statutory contest is an adequate remedy for irregularities in the process. The question is rather whether the entire election process is immune from judicial interference until the result is declared. The above authorities establish that it is." Id. at 160.

III. Conclusion

Because we conclude the State failed to meet its burden in the temporary injunction hearing, we hold the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the State's application for a temporary injunction. Accordingly, the order of the trial court is affirmed.

[1] Section 31.005 of the Election Code provides:

(a) The secretary of state may take appropriate actions to protect the voting rights of the citizens of this state from abuse by the authorities administering the state's electoral processes.

(b) If the secretary determines that a person performing official functions in the administration of any part of the electoral processes is exercising the powers vested in that person in a manner that impedes the free exercise of a citizen's voting rights, the secretary may order the person to correct the offending conduct. If the person fails to comply, the secretary may seek enforcement of the order by a temporary restraining order or a writ of injunction or mandamus obtained through the attorney general. Tex. Elec. Code Ann. § 31.005.

[2] Section 82.003 of the Election Code qualifies all registered voters over the age of 65 on election day to vote by mail. See Tex. Elec. Code Ann. § 82.003.

ANOTHER VOICE OF REASON

THE JAWORSKI LAW FIRM ATTORNEY & MEDIATOR THE WASHINGTON BUILDING 2228 MECHANIC STREET, SUITE 307 GALVESTON, TEXAS 77550 Office: 409-763-0700 Fax: 409-763-6352 josejawski@jlawfirm.com September 25, 2020 Blake A. Hawthorne, Clerk Supreme Court of Texas 201 W. 14th Street, Room 104 Austin, Texas 78701 RE: Case Number: 20-0729 Court of Appeals Number: 14-20-00627-CV Trial Court Number: 202052383 THE STATE OF TEXAS V. CHRIS HOLLINS, IN HIS OFFICIAL CAPACITY AS HARRIS COUNTY CLERK Dear Chief Justice Hecht and members of the Supreme Court of Texas, I respectfully submit this Amicus Letter in support of Harris County Clerk Chris Hollins' innovative plan to provide a vote by mail application with appropriate voter education information ("the Application") to all Harris County registered voters. The Clerk's plan encourages voting, it stimulates interest among all voters, whatever their politics, and the substance of the application and instructions is correct. Anytime a public servant exceeds expectations, that is, by doing more than the minimum task legally required to keep one's job, that public servant should be applauded, not sued. As former mayor of Galveston, Texas, I respectfully wish to amplify one point in this matter that pertains to self-governance of local government authorities. I understand the State of Texas has argued within this Election Code litigation that because Section 84.012 requires Clerk Hollins to send a vote by mail application to all registered voters who request one, the absence of language authorizing him to send such an Application on his own initiative (without being asked) means he shall not do so. I respectfully disagree with this incorrect and potentially dangerous statutory interpretation. The notion that local elected or appointed officials must have express permission from the Legislature or other central authority to act in furtherance of their broad mandate to govern is not consistent with the letter or spirit of Texas law as I understand it. In this instance, the Application is	Joseph S. Jaworski September 25, 2020 Page 2 broadly available online, and if a voter has no access to the internet, one may call from any phone to request an application be mailed. If such a request is made, the Clerk must accommodate the request. That's the law. At the same time, I see no law that forbids the Clerk from exceeding expectations by assisting voters - essentially meeting them on their level where they live - by sending the Application proactively. But the State's position is the law implicitly forbids the Clerk from going above and beyond the minimum. That is a dangerous construction of this Election Code provision. If this implied ban were applied to countless other local government laws, then Texas cities, counties and school districts are likely in for a rude awakening in the final analysis. The State seems to ask incredulously: "why would you ever send something or do something that was never requested?" What a dismal view of local government. As a general proposition, citizens are clamoring for solutions to myriad concerns; here Clerk Hollins has succeeded in offering a solution to safeguard our most sacred right in a most difficult time. If the voter concludes she would prefer to vote in person, then the worst that can be said is the voter was educated on her rights and given the option to apply which is, as this Court has correctly held, the voter's decision to make. Finally, my experience as councilmember and Mayor of the City of Galveston was significantly affected by Hurricanes Rita and Ike. And, as I write this letter, Tropical Storm Beta threatens serious flooding to Galveston Island. Such is the annual risk for Texas coastal communities subject to tropical weather. If a local election authority cannot engage in innovative solutions within the bounds of the explicit prohibitions of the code when disaster strikes, elections will be disrupted, and voting rights will be lost. I support innovative programs of local government, whether such plans involve public safety, public health or, as here, voting rights. I support state law that defines duties of local government officials, and then leaves the details to the popularly elected officialholder. I support Clerk Hollins' affirmative voter education outreach, and helpful provision to registered voters of applications to vote by mail, especially during this fraught and uncertain time where the public health is at great risk. Respectfully submitted,  Joseph S. Jaworski Former Mayor of Galveston, Texas 2010 - 2012
--	---

Amicus Brief of Joseph S. Jaworski in Tex. No. 20-0729

Automated Certificate of eService

This automated certificate of service was created by the eFiling system. The filer served this document via email generated by the eFiling system on the date and to the persons listed below. The rules governing certificates of service have not changed. Filers must still provide a certificate of service that complies with all applicable rules.

Envelope ID: 46596315

Status as of 9/25/2020 4:33 PM CST

Associated Case Party: Chris Hollins, Harris County Clerk

Name	BarNumber	Email	TimestampSubmitted	Status
Stanton Jones		stanton.jones@arnoldporter.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Daniel F.Jacobson		Daniel.Jacobson@arnoldporter.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
John B.Swanson		John.Swanson@arnoldporter.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT

Case Contacts

Name	BarNumber	Email	TimestampSubmitted	Status
Cameron Hatzel	24074373	Cameron.Hatzel@cao.hctx.net	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Susan Lea Hays	24002249	hayslaw@me.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Kyle Hawkins		kyle.hawkins@oag.texas.gov	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Lanora Pettit	24115221	lanora.pettit@oag.texas.gov	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Natalie Thompson		natalie.thompson@oag.texas.gov	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Wolfgang PHirczy de Mino, PhD		wphdmphd@gmail.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Christoper Carter		christopher.carter@oag.texas.gov	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Douglas Ray		douglas.ray@cao.hctx.net	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT
Christopher Odell		christopher.odell@arnoldporter.com	9/25/2020 4:31:01 PM	SENT